No Presidential Tax Increase For 1973

Wholesale Increase Is Noted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prices of a broad range of wholesale food, industrial raw materials and manufactured products rose an average of three-tenths of one per cent last month, the government reported today.

The report by the Bureau of Labor Statistics said the increase included a rise of six-tenths of one per cent for farm products, processed foods and feeds, while industrial commodities increased two-tenths of one per cent.

The report said that in the past three months, wholesale prices rose at an annual rate of 6.7 per cent compared with 4.9 per cent in the first and second quarters of the year, and that food and feeds soared at an annual rate of 17.4 per cent in the third quarter.

In the 13 months so far of President Nixon's wage-price controls, wholesale prices have risen at an annual rate of 4.3 per cent, compared with a rate of 5.2 per cent in the nine months prior to the controls.

The September increase brought the government's Wholesale Price Index up to 120.2 of its 1967 base of 100. This means it cost wholesalers $120.20 last month on the average for goods worth $100 five years ago.

The index was up 5 per cent in the past year, the bureau said.

Dr. Marina Whitman, a member of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, said the September price rise was half the average for the previous two months and that it showed "further progress in reducing the rate of inflation."

She said the fact that wholesale prices rose more in the first year of Nixon's controls than the year before was entirely due to sharp increases in farm prices.

Asked why the government didn't extend controls to prices at the farm, she said that would create the danger of shortages and possibly food rationing.

Food prices are controlled after sale from the farm, meaning that farm prices increases can be passed along to the consumer.

"While the rate of inflation has come down, it's still higher than we would like," Mrs. Whitman said.

Makes Tax Announcement

President Nixon held a rare news conference at the White House today and told reporters there would not be a presidential tax increase in 1973, but that congressional overspending might make one necessary. The President also fielded questions about the election and Vietnam. (UPI)

'New Internationalism' Proposed To Supplant Policy of President

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

Sen. George McGovern spoke today of a "new internationalism" to supplant President Nixon's foreign policy which he described as "unconscious isolationism." But while Democratic presidential candidate McGovern was giving his first detailed account of his foreign policy plans, Vice President Spiro T. Agnew strongly denounced him.

"Nobody can believe George McGovern," Agnew said, adding that the McGovern's policies only "make him very popular in some segments of North Vietnam."

At appearances in South Dakota Wednesday, Agnew said McGovern is "stirring the suspicions of people around the land and relying solely on a campaign of fear and innuendo."

McGovern, in a speech for the City Club of Cleveland today, said the Nixon foreign policies are isolating the United States from allies and trading partners.

"We are isolated from reality by the insistence that tough talk and big Pentagon budgets are somehow synonymous with national manhood," he said.

He urged rejection of "this unconscious isolationism in favor of a new internationalism based not only upon our vital interests, but also upon the kind of nation we can and should be."

The Democratic vice presidential candidate Sargent Shriver, expressed support in Denver for a decision of the Colorado Labor Council to endorse McGovern against the wishes of AFL-CIO President George Meany.

"If any labor leader, no matter how high he is," Shriver told the council, "tells you to vote for Richard Nixon he is telling you to vote against your own best interests and against the best interests of every worker in the country."

Shriver was to fly to San Jose and Los Angeles today.

Meanwhile, an internal confrontation was building up within the AFL-CIO over Meany's orders to state groups to repeal resolutions urging defeat of Nixon.

He has issued such an order to the state AFL-CIO in California and Oklahoma, and similar orders were expected in Minnesota, North Carolina, Nebraska, Iowa and Texas, where the state labor conventions have called for defeat of Nixon. Massachusetts Wednesday adopted a similar resolution.

In Washington, U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica issued a blanket order against comment on the Watergate case by anyone connected with it. The case involves the break-in and alleged bugging attempt at Democratic party offices on June 17.

Sen. McGovern's wife, Eleanor, was campaigning in Louisville, Ky., where she said Wednesday night that Americans have the feeling "they have been duped and cheated."

Railroad Retirement Veto Is Overridden

By JOHN CHADWICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With quick and decisive votes, Congress has overridden President Nixon's veto and granted 900,000 retired railroad workers a temporary 20-per-cent increase in pension payments.

Nixon vetoed the bill at noon Wednesday; by midafternoon, the House had voted 353 to 29 to override the veto, and a few hours later, the Senate voted 78 to 5 to override.

In both cases, the margin was far larger than the two-thirds majority required to upset the veto. The action means that the bill has become law.

The President said in his veto message that the pension hike would hasten the bankruptcy of the railroad retirement system. He protested that the bill provided no way to raise the extra funds for the higher payments.

Congress passed the bill last month in order to extend to retired railroad workers the same 20-per-cent increase voted earlier for Social Security recipients. Railroad workers are covered by a pension system separate from the Social Security system.

Nixon had reluctantly signed the Social Security increase after protesting that he thought it too high. It was attached to a debt-limit bill he needed in order to continue government operations.

During the Senate debate, some senators agreed with Nixon that the railroad fund is in shaky financial shape and said Congress next year must find some way to make it solvent.

However, Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., argued that with the Social Security increase already in effect, "equity required that we give a commensurate increase to railroad retirees."

The increase for railroad workers is effective only until next June 30, and Cranston said that to make the higher pensions permanent Congress must provide new financing.

The President proposed a substitute which he said would mean an average $28-a-month boost for a single worker and $47-a-month increase for a married couple.

Officials said that's about half the amount provided in the just-enacted law. In the House, Rep. Harley O. Staggers, D-W. Va., said Nixon waited until too late in the session for a leaner bill to be passed.

Bailey's Incident A Puzzle

"We did all we could locally. The mystery still remains to be solved," Sedalia Police Chief William Miller said Thursday.

Miller was commenting on the continuing puzzle of the disappearance of Bill Bailey, 1105 West 10th, who was last seen Sept. 18 at the Clark Service Station, Broadway and Kentucky. Bailey is the manager of the station.

Miller said that police here have exhausted all of their local leads. He also said that a weekend report of Bailey's presence in Sedalia proved to be false.

Bailey's wife, Althea, again told The Democrat-Capital Thursday that "something bad must have happened to him." Mrs. Bailey thinks that he was the victim of a robbery.

"We may never know what happened to him," she said.

Bailey was last seen at the station about 8 a.m. Sept. 18 by Carl Persinger, manager of the Broadway Derby Service Station across the street.

The car Bailey owned and may have driven out of the city was found Sept. 23 by Kansas City police in an Independence shopping center. No evidence of foul play was found in the car, a report by Kansas City police indicated.

About $800 to $1,000 in receipts from the weekend of Sept. 16 is still missing from the station.

Scientists Gather To Study BCG Prospects

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Cancer-fighting scientists from 10 nations are meeting here today to examine the potential of BCG as a possible new treatment for human cancer.

The bacteria substance has been viewed as a prospective treatment for cancer for a decade, according to the U.S. National Cancer Institute which is sponsoring the conference.

There is still no proof whether or not it will work, but research has been encouraging, says the NCI.

Studies also have suggested that BCG might serve to prevent at least one form of cancer—childhood leukemia—although that, too, is unproven, the institute has said.

The two-day conference of 80 scientists represents the first international meeting of researchers studying BCG.

By coincidence, it comes about two weeks after an Oak Ridge, Tenn. scientist reported using the substance against animal cancers. The report stirred widespread but quickly quashed hopes that a major breakthrough had already been achieved toward curing human cancers.

Long-used as an antituberculosis vaccine, BCG more recently came under investigation as a possible means of treating cancer by stimulating the body's natural immunological defenses against disease.

The material is actually a strain of tuberculosis bacteria which causes TB in cattle but not in humans.

The idea of using BCG against cancer is based on the fact that most people have developed a natural immunity to TB. Administering BCG to a cancer patient conceivably could reawaken his body's memory of its reaction to TB germs and marshal the body's defensive "shock troops" in great strength against the cancer invader.

Probably in anticipation of the exchange here, the National Cancer Institute last week issued a statement declaring that results obtained during the past few years limited human trials of BCG "while encouraging, do not represent a major breakthrough."

"BCG is not now ready for other than controlled clinical trials in human cancers and probably never will be of use by itself in curing patients with advanced cancer," the statement said, adding that results in human trials were "not definitive."

The institute's statement was triggered by the hope-laden public reaction—especially among cancer patients and their families—to a report Sept. 22 by Dr. Michael G. Hanna Jr. of the Oak Ridge National Laboratory, an NCI contract researcher, that BCG had proven 100 per cent effective in curing cancer in animals.

The Oak Ridge laboratory said the animal research described by Hanna did not represent a major breakthrough in the human cancer field.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon said today "there will be no presidential tax increase" in 1973 but argued that "congressional overspending" might make one necessary.

Holding a 40-minute news conference in his Oval Office, Nixon also declared that Vietnam peace talks are "in a sensitive stage."

And he said that his search for the quickest possible settlement will in no way be affected by the fact that a presidential election will be held Nov. 7.

Nixon, in discussing his tax policy, said he will rarely visit the campaign trail until Congress adjourns because he wants to remain in Washington to "fight the battle against rising spending."

He promised a succession of veto messages aimed at last-minute legislation that exceed his budget goals.

The President was first asked for a response to charges by some Democrats that his administration has been corrupt.

He responded by listing such charges made by Sen. George McGovern, the Democratic presidential nominee, and said some presidential advisers had suggested he respond in kind.

He said he rejected such advice because "I'm not going to dignify such comments."

As for what McGovern has been saying, Nixon declared "I think responsible members of the Democratic party will be turned off by this kind of campaign."

Nixon also fielded questions about the U.S.-Soviet grain deal and the bugging of Democratic National Committee headquarters at the Watergate building.

Addressing himself to allegations that grain exporters profited from advance information about the $750 million grain agreement, Nixon said the FBI was looking into the matter and asserted, "if there has been any impropriety, any illegality, we want to know."

He pictured the grain accord as beneficial to the nation, saying it would add a billion dollars to farm income, create thousands of jobs, save taxpayers $200 million in grain storage charges and help ease the country's continuing balance of payments crisis.

As for the Watergate affair, Nixon repeated that he had no personal knowledge of what was going on there and said he is convinced no principal figures of his campaign committee were party to the bugging.

Recalling his probe of former State Department official Alger Hiss as a member of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, Nixon said that inquiry was "basically a Sunday-school exercise" compared to the FBI's Watergate investigation.

He reported that 133 agents tracked down 1,800 leads and conducted 1,500 interviews in preparing the case that led to grand jury indictments of seven men accused of participating in the break-in and bugging operation.

Reminded of his promise to reduce the burden of property taxes, Nixon said he will give top priority to aiding the elderly. He said one million retired persons with incomes of less than $2,000 a year pay an average of one-third of that sum in property taxes.

Nixon termed this "fiscally wrong and morally wrong" and said his first legislative request next year would deal with that area.

Bond Request

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A battle with political overtones about the application of Missouri's laws on control of brucellosis in cattle surfaced again today with two new developments.

A recent audit by State Auditor Christopher S. Bond, Republican nominee for governor, charged that Dr. George E. Stiles, state veterinarian, had violated the law in making indemnity payments to livestock owners, including $9,900 in payments to himself for his own cattle.

Today Bond asked Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth for a legal opinion on whether Stiles had violated the state's conflict of interest law.

At the same time, Agriculture Commissioner Dexter D. Davis issued a statement defending Stiles and charging Bond with error in the audit report because he was ignorant of the disease control law passed while he was not a resident of Missouri.

"We can now better understand," said the statement from Davis, "why the Missouri Constitution requires a governor of the state to have been a continuous resident of Missouri for at least 10 years prior to the election. This requirement is for the very obvious purpose of assuring that the candidate has been exposed to the many problems the governor is called upon to resolve or intelligently consider."

The audit report charged earlier that Stiles had been paying larger indemnities to cattle owners than called for under the

The President said his goal will be to ease the property tax burden without raising other taxes.

Questioned about busing to achieve racial balance in the schools, Nixon called anew for legislation to halt court-ordered busing.

He said a new Congress might act quickly on this subject in 1973.

"That I would prefer," he said, describing the congressional route as easier and quicker.

But if all else fails, he said, he would back a constitutional amendment to achieve the same end.

At one point, Nixon became a bit philosophical about his role as acknowledged front-runner in the presidential campaign.

Noting his large lead in public opinion polls, he said he has cautioned his aides, "Don't rely on the polls."

The problem for a candidate who is far ahead in the straw votes, he noted, is to get his supporters to the polls on election day.

"What we need above all else," he said, "is a big vote."

In answer to a question, Nixon renewed his support for the administration's welfare reform plan, killed Wednesday by the Senate. He said he will renew his request for such legislation in 1973 and argued that he would not approve any program that would add to welfare rolls.

He said reform plans "by our opponents" would do that.

In discussing Vietnam, Nixon said his aim is to end the war "just as soon as we can get a settlement that is right." He added:

"Under no circumstances will the timing of a settlement ... be affected by the fact that there's going to be an election on Nov. 7."

While describing the peace talks as "in a sensitive stage," Nixon said he could not predict when or if the peace search would succeed.

Political Battle Over Brucellosis

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A battle with political overtones about the application of Missouri's laws on control of brucellosis in cattle surfaced again today with two new developments.

A recent audit by State Auditor Christopher S. Bond, Republican nominee for governor, charged that Dr. George E. Stiles, state veterinarian, had violated the law in making indemnity payments to livestock owners, including $9,900 in payments to himself for his own cattle.

Today Bond asked Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth for a legal opinion on whether Stiles had violated the state's conflict of interest law.

This requirement is for the very obvious purpose of assuring that the candidate has been exposed to the many problems the governor is called upon to resolve or intelligently consider."

The audit report charged earlier that Stiles had been paying larger indemnities to cattle owners than called for under the brucellosis control law passed in the early 1950s.

Today Davis said Stiles had been operating under a later law passed in 1959 which allowed broader action to control and eradicate livestock disease, and larger indemnity payments.

Davis said the Department of Agriculture had been complying with the 1959 law and would continue that program because brucellosis, which causes undulant fever in human beings, has been reduced from infection in one of 12 cattle in the early 1950s to a level of one in 200 now.

"Political criticism is one thing," Davis said, "but an attempt to stop a program which protects the public from infectious diseases is something else."

"Countless Missourians drink milk and we are not about to take risks with their health by stopping a vital program just because Mr. Bond wants it stopped. We will continue to do all we can under provisions of the law to stop undulant fever by destroying animals which have been exposed to brucellosis."

Bond's request for a legal opinion concentrated on the question whether Stiles had violated the conflict of interest law barring a state official or employee from passing judgment or having any investment "which will create a substantial conflict between his private interest and the public interest."

Louis Harris Survey

By LOUIS HARRIS
By a decisive 87-6 per cent margin, American sports fans feel that "despite all the problems at the games this year, the Olympics should be held in 1976." There had been some talk of abandoning the Olympics after the killing of Israeli athletes plus numerous disputes over officiating and the handling of this year's games in Munich.

The survey, conducted among a cross section of 1,834 households from Sept. 17 to 22, showed an interest level in the Olympics that would challenge football, baseball or basketball as major centers of sports attention in the U.S. In all, 69 per cent of the public 18 years of age and over said they followed the Olympics, compared with 63 per cent who regularly follow football, 60 per cent who are baseball fans, and 51 per cent who follow basketball.

The survey yielded a high degree of criticism, however, from American fans:
✓ By 67-8 per cent, fans feel that "the U.S. basketball team was cheated out of the gold medal." The last three seconds of the final between the U.S. and Russia was played three times amidst total confusion, before the Soviets were declared the winners by a one-point margin.

✓ By an even more decisive 76-15 per cent, most Americans feel "it was wrong to take the gold medal away from swimmer Rick Demont because he took pills for his asthma condition." Demont had been taking the pills since he was a small boy and U.S. officials said authorities were notified of this fact long before the games were held.

✓ By 66-24 per cent, two in three fans felt the U.S. athletes competed at a disadvantage with Communist countries. The prevailing view is that "it was not fair to have the Russians and other Communist countries bring professional athletes to compete with amateurs from the U.S. and other nations." This charge that Communist athletes are comparable to professionals in this country is not new. In the final medal standings, the United States finished second to Russia, as was the case in 1968's games.

Despite this believed disadvantage for American athletes, nonetheless fans here in this country were not prepared to admit that "other countries showed the U.S. that we are no longer superior in the Olympics." The vote was 44-41 per cent in favor of U.S. superiority. Thus, most fans feel that American athletes performed well in the face of tough conditions.

✓ On the controversial behavior of the U.S. gold and silver medal winners in the men's 400 meter run, fans did not sympathize with the athletes. By 53-37 per cent, a majority disagreed with the claim that "it was wrong to ban from all future Olympics the two black American 400 meter winners because they did not stand at attention when the national anthem was played." However, blacks felt the ban was unjustified by a lopsided 62-12 per cent count and young people under 30 shared this view by 51-38 per cent.

✓ The International Olympic Committee was also backed up by public opinion on its decision not to call off the games, after 11 Israeli athletes were seized by Arab terrorists and murdered in Munich. By a decisive 68-23 per cent, most fans thought the games should have gone on. People who said they were Jewish, however, disagreed by a narrow 46-43 per cent margin.

The highpoint of the 1972 Olympics for most Americans was the unprecedented string of seven gold medals won by swimmer Mark Spitz of the U.S. A substantial 76 per cent of the fans cited the clean sweep by Spitz as their top impression.

✓ At best, reaction to the officials who ran this year's Olympics was mixed. Mainly because fans enjoyed the competition and found it exciting and absorbing, they said "the International Olympic Committee did a good job of running the games," by a slim 44-42 per cent, however, by a much more convincing 42-29 per cent, fans also agreed with the charge that "the men running the Olympics were too backward and rigid, and interfered with the athletes too much."

In a word, it is apparent that the nearly 7 in 10 Americans who watched the 1972 Olympics felt that the games were rewarding, albeit they were run by officials that too often behaved like stuffed shirts. As with fan reaction generally in all sports, the fans feel the Olympics belong primarily to the competing athletes, while the management ought to stay invisible in the background. In 1976, that is the way most fans would like to see the Olympics run.

Sister Has Unusual Love for Column

Dear Ann Landers: My four-year-old sister loves your column. No, she doesn't read it. She eats it. And this is what I am writing about. The little rascal devours not only chunks of newspaper, but dirt from the houseplants, art-gum erasers, and table decorations.

My grandmother says to leave her alone — that this means her body needs certain elements she is not getting in her diet and it is nature's way of providing nutritional balance. My mother doesn't agree with her and our pediatrician is out of town. What about this? Is it harmful or beneficial? — Concerned Sis

Dear Sis: Young children should not be permitted to eat things they happen to find lying around. In fact, they should be taught at an early age to keep foreign objects and articles out of their mouths. "The body needs it" theory is an old-wives tale and has no scientific validity. Thousands of children die every year because they ate toxic substances such as chips of paint, detergents and a whole host of household items that should have been kept under lock-and-key or out-of-reach. I am glad your little sister loves my column but please keep it away from her until she can read it. It's not for eating.

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter moved to California two years ago to teach in an elementary school. She taught here in Connecticut for three years and her students really loved her.

My husband and our young son visited Renee in California last year and we want to do so again this Fall. But I just learned that Renee has a new roommate — a young man. I feel it would not be the proper environment for her 12 year old brother. Furthermore, if my husband knew about this living arrangement he'd be very upset.

When I phoned Renee to tell her about my misgivings, she said it was nobody's business who she lives with but she would ask her boyfriend to move out while we were in town if I felt it would upset her father. Last year her little brother stayed on with Renee a week after my husband and I returned home. I'm sure he'd want to do so again but I'm afraid Renee's boyfriend might move back with her. I'd hate for our son to see such going-on.

Renee is 26 and a nice girl, but the new morality is something I'm not ready for. Please tell me what I should do in regard to our upcoming plans. — Old Fashioned Me

Dear O.F.: Let Renee know that you, your husband and son will be coming to visit and that you appreciate her asking the boyfriend to live elsewhere during your visit. Tell her it would be nice if her young brother could stay on for an additional week, but you would not agree to it unless the boyfriend remains elsewhere. Ask her to let you know her decision.

Dear Ann Landers: See what you can do to change the old, tiresome practice of printing only the bride-to-be's picture in the paper. So often when the engaged girl's picture appears, the question that pops into my mind is, "Who'd marry HER?" Or, if she's very pretty, "I wonder what the guy looks like."

It would be interesting if the papers would run a picture of the engaged girl and her fiancé.

Topless Dancers

Found Innocent

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Three topless dancers charged with indecent exposure after raids on Kansas City, Kan., private clubs were found innocent by Municipal Judge Myles Stevens who held the city's nudity ordinance did not apply to private clubs.

The judge also dismissed charges against operators of the raided clubs after it was determined there was no city ordinance pertaining to the complaint filed against them: operating a general nuisance.

The ordinance provided that any person who appears in a public place in a state of nudity is guilty of a misdemeanor.

The prosecution contended because anyone can enter a private club upon making an application, the clubs are not private but public and the ordinance should apply.

Anthony Russo, a defense attorney, argued the clubs were licensed by the state as Class B private clubs and therefore the ordinance was not applicable.

CROW LIGHT guide to "Light Whiskey" -the biggest whiskey news since Repeal!

Not a Bourbon. Lighter than Scotch. Smoother than Canadian.

It's an all-new category of whiskey, just authorized.

It's here. Now. Light Whiskey.

Not a brand. A revolutionary new class of whiskey—unlike Bourbon, Rye, Scotch, blends or any of the traditional whiskeys you've known.

Light Whiskey. The lightest, smoothest whiskey ever made in America!

Its own light taste

Light Whiskey is made possible by sweeping new U.S. Government regulations. They permit radically different distilling and aging techniques (see box) which produce a whiskey with a delightful character all its own.

One sip of CROW LIGHT will show you that Light Whiskey is a clean break with the past. Light without being thin. Mild without being bland.

Why "Light Whiskey" is the first utterly new whiskey in 40 years.

Since Repeal, the same strict regulations have controlled whiskey making in America.

But in 1968, to enable domestic distillers to make a whiskey with the lightness of Scotch and Canadian, the Government specified rules for a totally new kind of American whiskey—to go on sale this year.

The new regulations meant that Americans could, for the first time, distill whiskeys above 160 proof. And age them in seasoned oak barrels.

The result: the revolutionary, remarkably smooth, new class of products—Light Whiskey!

Nothing shy about it

Don't be fooled by CROW LIGHT's gentle manners though. This is real whiskey all right. Fully 80 proof. But it may well be the most civilized whiskey in history.

Great mixed—or neat

Pick up your first bottle of CROW LIGHT on your way home tonight. Start by pouring it straight, over ice cubes in a wide glass. Wait. Let it chill. Then take it slowly, one smooth sip at a time.

Ahhh.

You can substitute CROW LIGHT, shot for shot, in all your favorite whiskey drink recipes. And it mixes better with fruit juices than do traditional whiskeys.

CROW LIGHT is every bit as good as our 137 years of experience can make it. In fact, we're so sure you'll be pleased with it, we're willing to refund every penny if you aren't.

Go ahead. We trust your judgment. Try CROW LIGHT tonight. A clean break with the past.

Note: For Bourbon drinkers, there's always Old Crow

Don't confuse new CROW LIGHT with our famous Old Crow. They're entirely separate, different products. We make Old Crow—and plenty of it—for the millions who enjoy smooth, mellow Bourbon, America's most popular drink.

Try CROW LIGHT tonight. Guaranteed to be the smoothest whiskey you ever tasted or your money back!

*We'll refund purchase price to purchaser if he is in any manner dissatisfied with CROW LIGHT. Send bottle with unused contents via Railway Express collect to: Crow Distillery Company, 99 Park Avenue, Room 1100, New York, New York 10016—and provide the following information: Your name, address, your comments, purchase size and price, store name and address.

Pollution Measure Approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — By near unanimous votes, Congress has sent President Nixon a $24.6-billion antipollution bill which aims to purify the nation's waters by 1985.

The three-year authorization measure must be backed up with appropriations.

Final passage in both houses came within three hours Wednesday evening. The House passed the bill 366 to 11 and the Senate followed with a 74-0 vote.

If fully financed, the water-quality bill would provide $9.7 billion in fiscal year 1973, $9.95 billion in 1974 and $7.65 billion in 1975.

It would allot $356 million for the current year for waste-treatment works already authorized.

Other facets of the bill include: —A requirement that industries discharging waste into waters apply the best practicable control technology by July 1, 1977 and the best available by July 1, 1985.

—$18 billion in grants to municipalities to build waste-treatment plants and improve sewage collection. The federal government would pay 75 per cent of the cost of building waste-treatment plants.

—Continuance of current water-quality standards plus limits on how many effluents a plant may pour into the nation's waters.

—Required government approval of state guidelines for issuance of permits for disposing effluents.

—Administration by the Army Corps of Engineers of a separate permit program for disposal of dredge or fill material in certain areas.

Procedure In Charge Questioned

FAIRFIELD, Calif. (AP) — No official records were made on the locations of seven of the 25 gravesites found near Yuba City before deputies arrested Juan Corona last year and charged him with the slayings, an undersheriff has testified.

Sutter County Undersheriff Frank Cartoscelli testified under cross-examination Wednesday that he marked the graves' locations on two courtroom maps from memory because he had visited the locations many times.

"Do you have any idea what directions are all about? How can you check anybody else's work when you don't even know which direction is south?" defense attorney Richard Hawk asked.

Hawk's questions came as Cartoscelli was winding up his effort to mark all 25 gravesites with red arrows on two maps — an aerial photograph map and large wall mock-up of the Feather River area where the graves were found.

The defense attorney pressed Cartoscelli, trying to show that the dots he marked on the maps were in some cases dozens of feet off the sites of the actual gravesites. The officer did not expand on why there were no official records on location of seven of the graves.

Corona, 38, a Mexican national who had a farm labor contract business, has pleaded innocent to the 25 murder charges against him. He was arrested four days after the first grave was discovered May 20, 1971, and has been in custody ever since.

Because a juror asked to be excused in the afternoon to attend a relative's funeral, the trial lasted only half a day Wednesday.

Money, Papers Reported Stolen

Grace Perkins, 115 East Seventh, told police a black purse, containing about $50 and papers, was stolen from her residence between 6:30 and 7 p.m. Wednesday.

Police said entry to the house was gained by tearing a screen in a door. Various papers from the purse were found in an alley behind the house, police said. Damage to the screen was estimated at $5.

Two dogs were stolen from the Sedalia Animal Shelter, on West Main, between 12:15 and 1:12 p.m. Wednesday, Frank Williams, an employee told police.

Williams said the animals, a miniature collie and a German Shepherd puppy, were released from their cage when a spring lock was forced open.

Answer Fire Alarms

Sedalia firemen extinguished a grass fire at 7:48 p.m. Wednesday at the railroad crossing at Clarendon Road. No damage was reported. The cause of the fire was listed as undetermined.

In another call, Sedalia firemen responded to a false alarm at 8:09 a.m. Thursday at 473 West Saline.

Early Donations

Reflecting 100 per cent participation by employees, two Sedalia businesses presented early gifts for this year's United Fund drive. Shown are Juanita Hood, representing Sedalia Bank & Trust Co., which offered a check for $1,291; Dr. John Owens, center, UF campaign chairman; and Bill Smillie, manager of the Consumer Store, whose employees gave $1,022 to the drive. This year's goal is $95,000.

Soviet Wheat Deal Probe Is Promised

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Agriculture Committee has promised a post-election probe of the U.S. wheat sale to the Soviet Union, a deal that Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz now says he should have handled differently.

Butz told newsmen Wednesday that if he had known that one of his assistants was planning to quit and take a job with a major grain exporter, he would not have sent him to Moscow for agriculture trade negotiations.

The timing of Clarence D. Palmby's resignation as assistant agriculture secretary to become vice president of Continental Grain Co. in New York has figured in the grain-trade dispute.

Palmby reportedly contracted for an expensive New York apartment last April, a day or so before leaving for Moscow with Butz and other negotiators. Palmby finally quit June 7.

Had he known that Palmby was buying the New York apartment, Butz said, "I would not have taken Mr. Palmby on the team."

He emphasized he was not questioning Palmby's integrity, but would have considered it unwise to include a departing official in the negotiations because "in our business, you operate in a goldfish bowl."

Palmby repeatedly has denied that he carried advance information of the Soviet Union's massive grain purchases to Continental.

Critics of the deal have alleged that major exporters, including Continental, profited from advance knowledge, while farmers were kept in the dark so their wheat could be bought before the large sale pushed prices up.

Meanwhile, Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., announced Wednesday that the Agriculture Committee will undertake a probe of the deal as soon as possible after the Nov. 7 election.

Talmadge, the committee chairman, said members will try to determine whether improper or illegal practices were followed and also will try "to correct any weaknesses in our procedures which have apparently created this controversy."

Talmadge questioned the Agriculture Department's export subsidy policy.

"There is some question as to whether a $250 million subsidy was needed this year when no other country had significant quantities of wheat to offer on the world market," he said.

A House Agriculture subcommittee also may launch a post-election probe of the wheat deal.

Highway 50 Opened For Wider Buses

Highway 50, from Sedalia to Kansas City, and Highway 13, from Warrensburg to Springfield, have been designated as legal routes on which 8½-foot buses may now travel, it was reported by the Missouri State Highway Commission Thursday.

The action followed approval of legislation in the Missouri House allowing buses up to 102 inches wide to operate on state highways which have lane widths of at least 12 feet.

Robert N. Hunter, chief engineer for the Commission, said the 24-foot pavement requirement severely limited route designations because most roads in the state system fail to meet this standard in segments long enough to make extensive routes practical.

Following passage of the House bill, an extensive study of the state's highway system was conducted. Most routes eligible for the wider buses were in the primary highway network. Interstate routes could not be included since federal law forbids buses of more than 96 inches in width to travel on them.

The two highways in the Sedalia area are among those considered "the most usable," Hunter said. They link major points of destination and substantially meet the intended requirements of the new law, he added.

Sedalians Appear For Court Hearings

Two Sedalia men appeared in Pettis County Magistrate Court Thursday morning.

Charles Lee Clark, 26, of 417 West Cooper, was bound over for trial to Pettis County Circuit Court on a charge of first degree armed robbery. Bond was continued at $3,500.

Clark allegedly robbed Gene Dotson, night attendant at Brown's Vicker Service Station, 204 North Missouri, of $106 Sept. 1. Clark allegedly used a .22 caliber revolver in the holdup. He was arrested by Sedalia police Sept. 5.

In another case, Lawrence Paul Sudduth, 207 East Seventh, was formally charged with uttering a forged instrument.

According to Pettis County Sheriff Emmett Fairfax, Sudduth allegedly cashed a $10 check Sept. 20, at the Kroger Family Center, 711 East Broadway, which was signed by William J. Sudduth.

The preliminary hearing is scheduled for Oct. 17. Bond was set at $1,000. Sudduth was taken into custody Wednesday by sheriff's officers.

Belfast Violence Continues

BELFAST (AP) — Bomb explosions killed one man and wrecked a Belfast store early today.

Patrick Connelly, 23, a Roman Catholic bricklayer, was killed and his parents and brother were wounded when a bomb went off as they watched television at home in Portadown, a predominantly Protestant industrial town south of Belfast. The bombing was blamed on Protestant extremists.

It was the 593rd confirmed fatality in three years of sectarian violence in Ulster.

A 200-pound bomb wrecked a Belfast Cooperative Society store in the city center and set a Cooperative Society warehouse ablaze. Firemen kept the flames from the neighboring Irish Times, a Catholic newspaper. Several other buildings were badly damaged.

Guerrillas have already bombed 15 Cooperative Society stores, owned mainly by Protestants, causing damage estimated at more than $24 million.

Another bomb damaged a courthouse in Cookstown northwest of Belfast.

Guerrilla snipers wounded two soldiers as they patrolled the city.

Another soldier was critically injured when a squad of masked men from the Protestant Ulster Defense Association stoned the car in which he was riding with a friend.

A brick smashed the windshield and the car crashed into a telephone pole. The two soldiers were off duty and in civilian clothes.

Meanwhile, the British army termed "ridiculous rubbish" a claim by the IRA's Provisional wing that IRA guerrillas killed five members of an undercover army intelligence unit in Belfast. The IRA claimed one of the five was an army major known by the code name "Bossman Jim."

The army acknowledged that one of its men, Tom Stewart, was killed by machine gun bullets Monday while posing as a driver for a Belfast laundry.

Charge Insufficient Funds Check Written

A man who gave his name as John Miller Kinker when arrested by the Highway Patrol Wednesday in Kansas City was formally charged in Pettis County Magistrate Court Thursday with writing an insufficient funds check of more than $100.

Magistrate Judge Frank Armstrong scheduled the preliminary hearing for Oct. 19. Bond was set at $5,000.

Kinker, 31, Kansas City, signed a check for $4,204.20 to the Central Missouri Sales Co., 3503 Limit, as Robert E. Snyder when he purchased 17 steers Monday, according to Pettis County Sheriff Emmett Fairfax.

Kinker used yet another name, Dennis Alexander, to order the cattle shipped to Wilson Certified Foods, Inc., in Kansas City, Fairfax revealed.

However, the truck driver recognized the livestock as being the type usually purchased to raise to maturity and asked the Highway Patrol to check on Alexander, the sheriff recounted. Investigation revealed the name switches as well as the bogus check situation.

Agent Admits Reports

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former FBI agent who took part in the bugging of Democratic National Headquarters says he delivered reports on the eavesdropping to the Committee for the Re-election of the President, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

Times reporters Jack Nelson and Ronald J. Ostrow said they interviewed Alfred C. Baldwin III for more than five hours in New Haven, Conn., last weekend.

The Times said Baldwin, a 36-year-old former Marine Corps captain, decided to become a government witness in the bugging case only after he was "disowned" by the Committee for the Re-election of the President.

Baldwin told the Times he was in the Howard Johnson Hotel across the street when police caught five persons in Democratic headquarters in the Watergate complex in Washington D.C., June 17 as they were installing bugging equipment.

Until that morning, Baldwin told the Times, he had monitored a telephone tap placed in the Democratic offices earlier.

Baldwin said he would put his eavesdropping logs in an envelope, which he addressed to a committee official whose name he has since forgotten and would take them to the Nixon committee offices seven blocks away, the newspaper said.

The eavesdroppers, he told the Times, apparently were interested primarily in information about Sen. George McGovern, Lawrence F. O'Brien, then Democratic party chairman, and about Democratic political strategy.

The Times quoted Baldwin as saying he was hired by the Committee for the Re-election of the President as a security guard for Martha Mitchell, wife of former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell, but was later assigned such tasks as monitoring anti-Nixon demonstrations.

He told the Times his boss was James W. McCord Jr., security coordinator for the Nixon committee and one of seven persons indicted in the Watergate bugging case. Baldwin has not been charged in the case.

McCord, Baldwin said, assigned him to monitor a phone tap on May 25. Baldwin said he kept logs on about 200 conversations he monitored over a three-week period, the newspaper said.

Baldwin told the Times reporters he never questioned his orders from McCord.

"After all, his boss was John Mitchell, the committee director and form attorney general of the United States," the Times quoted Baldwin as saying. "And his superior was President Nixon."

Babysitters Are Trained, Not Born

By HELEN HENNESSY

NEW YORK — (NEA) — It's good for a laugh when mom opens the door to a baby-sitter who turns out to be younger than the "baby." But it's only funny on television.

Parents should ask themselves one question before giving their sons or daughters permission to take charge of someone else's youngster. Is my child responsible enough to baby-sit?

Remember how careful you were in selecting a baby-sitter? As a responsible parent you should help your own child to become the responsible baby-sitter you would have chosen.

Standing in for parents, even for a short period of time, is a challenging experience. And there are important duties that must be assumed when taking care of children. If your youngsters are in their teens you may have forgotten infant care techniques and it might be wise to go over some of the basics.

Extra care in handling is essential. Baby's bones and muscles are in the early stages of development. Also, if a formula is to be prepared, the ingredients must be in the correct proportions. So it is important for a baby-sitter to be careful and exacting and to understand the formula's preparation.

When babies are awake, they must never be left unguarded. Buttons, pills and other small objects look like tasty treats to a young one. Even while the baby is asleep, an occasional peek is wise.

Caring for children past the infant stage has its challenges, too. As children grow older they become more alert and inquisitive. They like to explore the most amazing places and inevitably get into mischief. It's all too easy for the playpen set to become fascinated with scissors, knives, letter openers, electrical outlets and other potentially dangerous objects.

Children need the opportunity to be independent but they must be watched carefully and handled with tact. Toddlers are often wise beyond their years. Many a young sitter has learned this to her chagrin. Mom may know her toddler's every trick. But the baby-sitter won't. And her charge will play the whole bag — or as many as the traffic will bear.

Some youngsters are in diapers until the age of three. Diapering a tot is difficult for a mother and even more trying for an inexperienced baby-sitter. Teach your child how to fold the diaper and hold it away from the child when pinning it.

Helping to prevent diaper rash and chafing and keeping baby comfortable are essential aspects of the diapering process. Here are a few hints that should help your child perform the diapering task efficiently.

Make sure the parents tell the sitter where they keep things like baby oil, powder and diapers. The first step in diapering is to clean the baby. Baby oil is an ideal lubricant for this cleaning process. An application of a baby lotion that is easily absorbed into the skin will moisturize, soothe, protect and allow baby powder to glide on easily. Finish the job with a light dusting of baby powder containing petroleum jelly. It's a barrier against wetness.

Accidents and illness are not likely to occur. But a baby-sitter must be equipped to deal with an emergency should it arise. Make certain your daughter has the phone numbers of the local police, fire department and pediatrician written down. Before the parents leave the baby-sitter should have the phone numbers where they, or a relative or neighbor, can be reached. And while she is getting that information it's a good time for her to discuss with the parents the rules of the house, such as television time, bedtime and snacks.

Should you wonder if your child is ready to baby-sit ask yourself whether or not you would leave her in charge if you had an infant or young one. If you have given her the advice and support needed, you are probably confident of her ability.

And, as an extra advantage, let her know that you are only a phone call away and will gladly offer any help or support she needs.

Baby and Sitter Smile

Diaper changing isn't a disaster when the babysitter knows what to do. Instructions from the mother of the child always help if the child has special skin conditions or special privileges.

Polly's Pointers

Unique System For Filing Pointers

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — After reading Miss A.'s letter about wanting a good way to file Polly's Pointers for future use I removed my manila folder from the filing cabinet and checked through the clippings before making the following suggestions. I did not always date each one as I now do. The earliest ones I dated are September 25, 1967. I do want to stress the dating be done with a bright-colored felt marker. File the most recent in the front of the folder and, before filing, use the felt marker and a ruler for underlining any item you think will be referred to later. I keep all the Pointers' clippings in the same folder and have files on many subjects. For example, I have a sheet of paper in the housecleaning folder and then notations such as see Polly's Pointers dated June 8, 1972. If the method does not appeal to Miss A. she could paste the clippings in a scrapbook and across the top of each page make notations as to the subjects covered in each clipping. After clipping such items for filing I neatly place the newspapers in large shopping bags or cartons and save them for the next Boy Scout paper drive. I am a working wife with a large house, vegetable and flower gardens and am very active in church work and have found many of the Pointers most helpful. I am often asked how I do so much. They do not say but imply "at your age." I am in my late 50s. The answer is in organization, love of life, people and nature and an optimistic approach. — ALMEDA

DEAR GIRLS — I am sure Almeda's letter will inspire many of you as it has me — oh, to be so organized. — POLLY

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — I have an empty glass wine bottle with a glass stopper that I cannot remove. I have tried applying heat to the neck of the bottle, have placed olive oil around the lip but the stopper does not budge. I am afraid of applying too much force for fear of breaking the bottle. I do hope one of the readers can help me. — GLADYS

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is trying to board a crowded bus and have someone either in front or back of me with a large, heavy suitcase try to push their way in and then try to put the suitcase in the rack above my head when they could check it for nothing. — G. E.

Drug Course a Success

A "smashing success" was the term applied to a drug education course at State Fair Community College Wednesday night by its instructor, Ann Murrell. Miss Murrell said she was especially surprised by the large number of enrollees after she had to cancel a parent drug education course recently when only two people showed up for it.

Miss Murrell, 25, who admits she is not an expert on drugs, is the drug abuse coordinator for the Missouri Valley Human Resource Development Corporation. She said she plans to rely heavily on films and cassette recordings for topics of discussion for the class. More than 50 persons have shown an interest in the course, which is held on Wednesday and Thursday.

The "students" are mostly area high school and junior high teachers with a sprinkling of younger people. The course was approved by the Sedalia 200 School District board of education for mandatory continuing teacher education.

The young drug counselor-instructor, told the participating class members that marijuana "was of the greatest concern in this area, especially in the counties along the (Missouri) river. In Pettis County the farmers tend to keep the fence rows clean and weed patches cut so that the wild plant is not as plentiful." She noted that the local "grass" is of a poor quality, "one or two on a one-to-ten scale" and is known as "Mississippi Mud."

The discussion was then turned over to the members of the class and varied points of view were expressed. Teacher Gerald Holman said he had no doubt about the use of marijuana in the community but did not know how widespread it was, while fellow instructor at Smith-Cotton, Frank Russell estimated 30 per cent of his students gave him the impression they had experimented with it.

College student Linda Kelly felt it was even more of a problem than the men had suggested. She had finished a semester at Central Missouri State University, Warrensburg, where she said use of marijuana was widespread. She said she felt it was "more common in Sedalia than people would imagine."

Miss Murrell said that because of its size Sedalia is a distribution point to many smaller surrounding communities and that marijuana can be easily purchased here.

Also discussed was a need for more drug education for younger students. Linda Kelly said she felt that experimenting in drugs would continue until more effective education was available in the community and a teacher from Sacred Heart School said she was aware of a high degree of interest in marijuana and other drugs among students not yet in high school.

Raymond E. Barrows

Candidate Visits In Sedalia

Calling Pettis County one of three key counties in his bid for election to the U.S. Congress, Republican Raymond E. Barrows of Appleton City visited Sedalia Wednesday.

Barrows is running to unseat Rep. William J. Randall from the Fourth District seat in the House of Representatives.

In an interview with The Democrat-Capital, Barrows said the farmer is the most important economic factor in the Fourth District. "I feel that the whole basis of our economy must start with the farmer," he said. "If the farmer prospers, then the rest of us will too."

Barrows also said steps must be taken to make farming more appealing, adding: "We have too many people moving to the cities."

As a member of Congress, Barrows said, he would work for a national right to work law. He said states with such laws have an advantage over Missouri in attracting industry. He said such a law would not "tear organized labor apart," as some have claimed.

Barrows said he would go along with an increase in the minimum wage from $1.60 to $1.80 an hour, but said anything beyond that would work to the detriment of young people and other "marginal" employees.

The candidate predicted that President Nixon would carry Missouri by 200,000 votes in the Nov. 7 election.

Barrows is a car dealer in Appleton City.

Red Tide Dissolves Off Coast

BOSTON (AP) — A red tide of toxic algae has all but disappeared from the waters off the Massachusetts coast, but it remains trapped inside clam shells in commercial beds and may prevent clam digging for another eight weeks.

Dr. William Bicknell, state commissioner of public health, said Wednesday commercial harvesting of softshell clams and mussels remains banned, and it would be at least two weeks and maybe eight weeks before diggers can go back to work.

"The organism (red tide) is now probably down to its normal levels in the water," Bicknell said. "We are waiting for the toxin to naturally wash out of the shellfish..."

"The red tide issue is not over," he said, disputing a Food and Drug Administration statement earlier in the day that all shellfish now being harvested and shipped from New England are safe for consumers.

Bicknell said that before commercial clam beds are reopened, certain tests proving negative must be performed consecutively over a two-week period on every clam bed affected by the ban imposed Sept. 18.

Jury Conviction In Shooting Case

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — A Wyandotte County jury has convicted James Browning, 35, of voluntary manslaughter in the May 16 shooting death of Clarence W. Blanks, 85, his roommate.

Judge William J. Burns gave the defense until Oct. 13 to file an appeal and deferred sentencing.

Defense attorney Lawrence G. Zukel questioned whether testimony from Dr. Angelo Lapi, who performed the autopsy, could conclusively establish the cause of death.

Zukel said that "Dr. Lapi said Blanks had emphysema, pneumonia, hardening of the arteries and high blood pressure. He (Dr. Lapi) said a man with all these conditions could have died from excessive drinking or flu."

In Ranks

Private Charles E. Langewisch, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Langewisch, Sweet Springs, recently completed a 14-week automotive repair course at the U.S. Army Ordnance Center and School, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.

During the course, he was trained in the maintenance and repair of wheeled and tracked vehicle engines and accessories, power train units and chassis components.

Pvt. Langewisch is a 1970 graduate of Sweet Springs R-VII High School, and attended Central Missouri State University, Warrensburg.

Jim Spain Criticizes Danforth

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Missouri Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth has known for some time about prostitution in the Ft. Leonard Wood area of Pulaski County in the south central part of the state, the Democratic nominee for state attorney general claims.

"The condition has been there for four years and Danforth has known about it," said state Rep. James E. Spain said Wednesday night. "He was a member of the Missouri Task Force on Organized Crime, which pointed out prostitution in the area."

Spain also told a group of students at the University of Missouri-Kansas City that Danforth responded too late to a request from the Pulaski County prosecuting attorney to raid alleged houses of prostitution.

He said Danforth was mailed a letter Aug. 22 which asked for aid. "He didn't do anything until Sept. 7 and then he made a speech 100 miles away," Spain said.

Danforth spoke Sept. 7 at a convention in Columbia, telling the audience the citizens of Pulaski County did not want good law enforcement and "they have not wanted wide-open vice to be curtailed."

Spain said he approved of the raids last weekend in which 37 persons were arrested but emphasized he thought they were too late.

Ceiling Advocates Optimistic

WASHINGTON (AP) — Advocates of a toughly enforced $250-billion government spending ceiling say they think they have the votes to give President Nixon virtually unlimited authority to tailor outlays to fit the limit.

The House is tentatively scheduled to vote next Tuesday on ceiling legislation. The Rules Committee voted to clear it Wednesday, but with one proviso: that an amendment may be offered that would in effect limit the President to proposing specific spending cuts, but leave the decision with Congress.

Rep. John S. Anderson of Illinois, chairman of the House Republican Conference, told a reporter the outlook is good for retaining the full presidential authority in the bill.

"We need about 50 Democratic votes," Anderson said, "and I think Wilbur Mills should be able to bring along that many with him."

Mills, the Arkansas Democrat who heads the Ways and Means Committee, supports the stronger version. He said his count shows substantially more support among Democrats than Anderson said is needed.

The spending ceiling is part of a bill providing a $15-billion temporary increase in Treasury borrowing authority. Unless Congress acts, the debt limit will drop below the actual debt Nov. 1 and the government theoretically would be unable to pay its bills.

Committee Has Advice For Candidates Wives

By JANET STAIHAR
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Republican Congressional Committee has some advice for candidates' wives: Watch your cigarettes, lay off the gum and never look bored. And bow your head during the entire invocation.

Those tidbits of political etiquette appear in the recently published "Wives' Manual," a 10-page booklet which tells spouses of GOP candidates the do's and don'ts, of ladylike behavior on the campaign trail.

"Considerate women never let smoke waft in another's face; they never leave butts burning in ashtrays," advises the manual. "Discriminate women never smoke on the street or when dancing; they never let a cigarette dangle from the lips or exhale through the nose."

Such admonishment ranks the Capitol Hill chapter of the Women's Political Caucus which takes on the Wives' Manual in this month's newsletter, "Equal Times."

"The role of the candidate's wife is clear," said Equal Times in an editorial. "She is totally submerged in her husband's identity."

Featured on the cover of the Wives' Manual is a beribboned girl elephant wearing a smile, red lipstick and a pants suit.

The booklet was written by Mary Ellen Miller, special assistant to Congressional Committee Chairman Rep. Bob Wilson of California. She was aided by several wives of Congressmen.

To women whose husbands are running for the House of Representatives the manual suggests:

—Never talk loud, or argue about your husband or his political positions with anyone. Steer clear of controversial statements.

—Applaud as though you mean it.

—When your husband is speaking, watch him proudly. Never appear bored, even if you have heard the same speech repeatedly.

—When sitting on a stage, or at the head table, either cross your ankles or keep your knees together.

—A steely hand shake is unladylike.

—Never let your picture be taken while holding a cocktail glass or a cigarette.

—It is safer not to drink liquor. But each candidate knows his own district, and probably what the reaction might be.

Spring Fork Lake Fish Stock Is Up

Good news is in store for area fishermen after it was announced at the Sedalia Water Board meeting Wednesday night by Herb Taylor, department manager, that about 1,200 pounds of 3- to 5-pound fish were added recently to the Spring Fork Lake stock and that a similar size load is to be received in the near future.

L. C. "Red" Heurman, plant superintendent, discussed continuing problems with a number of constant-use chemical mixers employed by the water department. It was decided that the department will contact Black and Veatch of Kansas City, consulting engineers on the apparatus, before taking any other action. He explained the firm recently advised sending one of the machines back to the company for disassembly and analysis, a plan he indicated would be less than the best option.

The board inspected and tested three types of photocopiers as the beginning of plans to replace the currently used 7-year-old office copier. Included in the testing were two feed copiers, an Olivetti and a Speed-O-Print, along with one book-type copier provided by 3-M.

Ron Rouchka, of Sedalia Office Supply, demonstrated the Speed-O-Print copier and agreed to order one of his firm's book-type copiers to demonstrate for the board. No decision was made concerning which copier to purchase.

Another topic of discussion concerned what type of method should be used to learn the point of restriction in a 20-inch line between Spring Fork and the water plant. Under consideration are such methods as the use of a device which travels through the pipe and halts at the slow-down point, as well as a system of gauges along the line. A course of action will be decided upon later.

Lloyd Kindle submitted a request to tap that same line where it crosses his property but was refused. Kindle wanted to tap the line to obtain water for livestock but was informed by Heurman that the speed of the water's movement might not allow enough pressure to force water to the surface during a good portion of the year.

The location of the requested tap site was described as the first farm on the east side past Flat Creek. Taylor revealed that the original land owner did not obtain water rights for the easement but took cash instead.

The board granted a request for service at 3500 South Missouri. Although the request was for a small individual service line, the board voted to maintain its policy of requiring a main extension as recommended by Taylor.

Taylor also revealed the department is in the process of installing service to Klassic Manufacturing Co., as well as the MFA service station at 32nd and Limit.

Paraguayans Want Wally To Stay

By ROBERT D. OHMAN
Associated Press Writer

ASUNCION, Paraguay, (AP) — Instead of "Yankee go home," the slogan in Asuncion is "Wally don't go." The State Department is still the target.

The unusual appeal to keep a diplomat here is being made for Wallace E. Keiderling, cultural affairs officer. He is nearing the end of a three-year assignment and is scheduled to return to Washington about

Dec. 1 unless his tour is extended.

At a "demonstration" in the Asuncion Tennis Club more than 100 Paraguayans, including artists and musicians, called on Washington to let Keiderling remain. Petitions with more than 10,000 signatures and some thumbprints of persons who can't write were presented to the U.S. charge d'affaires, Ralph Richardson.

"We sincerely ask that Wally, his wife and family be permitted to stay with us for three more years, nothing more," one speaker said.

The crowd responded with cheers when Keiderling, speaking Guarani, said: "I am very fond of Paraguay and the Paraguayans."

Keiderling is the only member of the foreign diplomatic corps to speak the Indian dialect used by most Paraguayans. His determination to learn Guarani and to play the Paraguayan harp, plus a packed schedule of events throughout the country have endeared him to thousands — but some people at the embassy are said to feel that Keiderling is not fitting the proper mold for a career employee and so should return to Washington for retraining.

Keiderling, 42, is not in the normal foreign service pattern. Born in Westfield, N.J., he received his bachelor's degree at Oklahoma State University in 1954. Then for about six years he worked as a lifeguard in Dade County, Fla., or was off touring Europe, Asia or Latin America with a rucksack and his balalaika.

In 1961 he received his master's degree in Florida and joined the U.S. Information Service. In Bolivia he met and married his wife Rosaria. Two daughters were born in Bolivia and a son in the Dominican Republic.

After arriving here Keiderling undertook the complete refurbishing of the Paraguayan-American cultural center, where 1,000 students are studying English.

He expanded one art gallery and added another, doing the panel work himself while his wife sewed the drapes. Occasionally the three children slept in the center while the parents worked late.

Keiderling's boldest venture was renting a train — with approval from the cultural center's six Paraguayan and five U.S. directors.

The six-car musical train with Keiderling and 12 Paraguayan musicians made a four-day tour to 25 towns in the interior.

By estimate, 40,000 persons attended performances given from the flat-car stage. Another trip is scheduled next week to help the town of Luque celebrate its anniversary.

Keiderling wants to remain here, but says he will accept any Washington ruling.

Canadian Voters Scare Candidates

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

VANCOUVER, B.C. (AP) — An outsider viewing Canada's election campaign gets the impression in this Pacific coast province that the parties are running scared — scared of a restless electorate and its unpredictable ways.

There are big issues, but party leaders seem curiously agreed that it's best not to talk about them too directly or too much.

The skittishness can be noted in other provinces too, but here it is pronounced. Politicians are acutely aware of the disconcerting habit British Columbia voters have of periodically jolting them. This year the voters are markedly restless and probably less predictable than ever. They demonstrated that in August by ousting a premier who had served them 20 years.

The federal election for a new House of Commons will be held Oct. 30. The party that dominates the Commons names the prime minister.

If British Columbia should swing sufficiently, it could have a decisive effect on the hopes of Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau for a working majority in the House of Commons. It is even possible that a big swing could help topple him. The experts are not expecting that, but a Trudeau setback, leaving him with less authority than before, is a possibility.

In the 1968 general election the nation's No. 2 party, Robert Stanfield's Conservatives, was blanketed in this province. Trudeau's Liberal party won 15 of the 23 seats at stake; the New Democratic party of Socialists won eight.

The New Democrats and the Social Credit parties do not amount to much nationally, considering the number of House of Commons seats they have been able to win.

The Conservatives here say they have hopes of picking up a significant number of seats. They bank on signs of resentment of Trudeau, on hints that much of the enchantment that swept him into office as a new-comer has dissipated in four years. This province often feels remote from and abused by Ottawa. One Liberal leader here who worked mightily in 1968 for Trudeau refuses this year to have anything to do with the campaign.

Campaigning here can be difficult. Issues are real enough, but probably all too complex.

British Columbia has the highest unemployment rate of any Canadian province, and unemployment plus the economy make up the major issues across the nation. Every candidate is in favor of more jobs and each suggests he knows best how to accomplish this. Every candidate espouses Canadianism and is an economic nationalist as well. Every candidate deplores the overwhelming presence of U.S. capital and American ownership of Canadian industries. Every candidate is in favor of cleaner environment.

British Columbia seems to feel it has been shabbily treated by the central government in Ottawa, especially in matters of taxation, and this also can reflect in the result.

"Timbuktu, Africa and Beyond"

In deepest Africa is the ancient city of Timbuktu. Today a majority of people believe there is no such place, but a thousand years ago, it was one of the two most important cities of inner Africa. Sijilmasa, the capital city of Africa five hundred years ago, today is a forgotten area of Arabian Night monumental ruins, now called the "Lost City of Africa" or "The City of the Dead." Somewhere in these ruins is the hidden mud-domed tomb of Mulai Reshed, the sultan who conquered Morocco in 1668. His treasures have never been uncovered.

Deaf and Blind Learn Photography

ROMNEY, W.Va. (AP) — Deaf and blind children in experimental joint classes at the West Virginia Schools for the Deaf and Blind here are being trained for photography-related jobs.

"Once this class proves to be the success we expect it to be, more and more classes will be integrated with both deaf and blind," predicts Dale Rawlings, a counselor for the deaf and blind.

"We think we're the first" with such integrated classes, instructor Charles Thompson said.

Thompson teaches the students, enrolled in the school from throughout West Virginia, skills in television photography, editing television tape, still photography and processing and printing of both black and white and color films.

Everyone gets a chance to try everything, but the deaf students concentrate on the visual aspects of the course such as film editing and picture taking, while the blind are setting up and operating equipment and performing darkroom work. The darkroom equipment has settings and numerals printed in braille.

"I think this will be very successful for both groups," Thompson said. "Once we get the program underway full-time, we will be able to place students in jobs. We already have people crying for these trained technicians."

He said that if he gets a student who is well-motivated and who has ability, he can train him in one year.

The program opened as a four-week summer session this year and will continue through the regular school year. Thompson, who credits school superintendent Eldon E. Shipman with being the main driving force behind the program, hopes to have two or three classes of six students each.

The deaf and those blind students with partial vision are sent to take photos. "Charles gives them cameras and says 'go take pictures,'" Rawlings said. "Then when they return he begins explaining the processes to them. After that they go out and take more pictures and they compare the first and second products."

Some new sign language symbols had to be devised for the course to allow the students to communicate. The sign for focusing a lens became a flattened hand moving from one eye to the other palm. A diazo-process photocopy using odiferous chemicals is symbolized by a "d" symbol with the right hand while the left hand holds the signer's nose—literally, a "stinking d."

Students Experience Sea World

By ERNESTINE GUGLIEMMO
NEW YORK — (NEA) — Seventy students about to set forth on a 14,000-mile journey will use the sky and sea instead of a blackboard as a backdrop for their classroom.

A hulking Norwegian square rigger, the Stratsraad Lehmkuhl, is the classroom for the Oceanics, a non-profit floating secondary school. On an eight-month voyage of discovery, it replaces the traditional classroom globe with actual landings at such mystery-cloaked places as Dakar, Casablanca and Istanbul.

The students go to sea as sailors, not passengers. With the first swelling of sails upon leaving port, they are at work—scrubbing decks, repairing bulwarks, standing watch and climbing aloft.

Rolling with the cadence of the waves, the Oceanics sails on its third voyage this year with specific geographic and intellectual destinations. The floating classroom combines a world of work, study and travel.

Boredom was responsible for it all. Concerned about their children's lack of interest in school, Stephanie and Charles Gallagher, educational film producers, began researching other possibilities.

Since Mr. Gallagher was interested in sailing and both liked the idea of going someplace while the students studied, the idea of a schoolship began to take shape. Stephanie Gallagher found interested parents who could afford the tuition and Charles Gallagher went to Norway to find a ship. And so they began the Oceanics.

The Oceanics is co-educational, abandoning the all-male sailing tradition. "We're taking 15 girls this year," said Stephanie. "We couldn't take half and half yet because we need a large number of men

The vessel sails to five continents and the students prepare for ports of call by language and history reviews and a study of the cultures.

Once ashore, the students go on field trips where they become immersed in the new culture. Parents agree in contracts not to send money so the students are sent out to explore with backpacks carrying provisions and a $5 weekly allowance to live on.

Teachers arrange short-term projects where students might live in villages and work on coffee plantations, or assist Peace Corps members in distributing medical supplies or dig ditches.

"When you've learned to get by on five dollars a week, you get to see how other people live. You know some roads are dangerous because of bandits. You learn to like carrot juice and lots of liquids because they're cheap and to be careful of the food and how to avoid dysentery," explains Connie Dineen, a 20-year-old returning for her second voyage.

are ready for this kind of experience," said Stephanie. "Academic ability doesn't matter. We have small enough classes to teach more than a year's worth of work."

"We know the problems we can take and the ones we won't touch. We can take lazy, fresh and spoiled kids, even nonreaders from ghettos. We can take 50 students who have smoked marijuana, but we can't take even one who feels he needs it."

aloft, especially in rough weather. We take girls who don't mind hard work, not high fashion-minded young ladies.

Out of sight of land, the students deal with the experience at hand. They map charts, trace courses, learn trigonometry, geometry and astronomy for navigation and piloting and complete the regular high school requirements. The Oceanics also offers college level courses and arranges tutorial groups for any special requirements.

Swashbuckling

Boots with cuffs, buckles, beads and textured heels step onto the fashion scene. Accents add to the soft suedes and fall colors of boots that walk in any weather and with any outfit.

Boots Toe the Fall Line

By HELEN HENNESSY

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Once, the jackpot fashion question each summer was: "Will boots be in style again next fall?" But since they've enjoyed such a continued acceptance for the past few years, nobody wonders now.

Now that the year of the hemline yo-yo is over and most hemlines will be at the prettiest and most feminine length — just around the knee — boot stylists are taking the cue.

This fall's more ladylike higher heels and rounded toes blend well with the new look, report stylists of a leading boot manufacturer. Sixteen inches is a popular height. Elastic gores in boot construction give a comfortable contoured fit revealing the shape of the leg.

Now that women have discovered how pants have simplified their lives, fashion designers find there is no turning back. Made for wear under this year's pants are contoured boots eight or nine inches high, hugging the calf, and with all the variety of shoe bases available on regular boots, report footwear experts. The fashion forerunners will be seen sporting boots with nail studding zippers set at different angles and buckled "combat boots," according to stylists at SCA International, a leading footwear company.

"Cuffs will be a familiar sight on boots but with a new twist — cuffs of contrasting colors," these experts say. "Cuffs loom very large this season because boots are much snugger around the ankle, allowing for more supple fullness in the top."

Right in tune with the layered look is flocking in boots, texture upon texture, buckles and multicolors. For the budget conscious, the comfortable and less expensive stretch vinyls, either crinkly or smooth, remain a wardrobe basic.

Heritage Festival Recalls Bright History on River

By WES COOK
Associated Press Writer

WESTON, Mo. (AP) — The completion of the Platte Purchase in 1837, adding more than two-million acres to the northwestern corner of Missouri, gave birth to this town that was once second only to St. Louis as the most populous and prosperous on the Missouri River.

From 1939 to 1955 Weston was "Queen of the River." Sunday its nearly 1,500 residents will share its Heritage Festival with area residents in Missouri and Kansas, a time when the names, the great adventures, the originality and craftsmanship of its pioneers are recalled in a day-long festival.

It is a town that boasts more than 100 antebellum homes (built between 1840-55), many of which are filled with priceless antiques and heirlooms. The antebellum homes have won for the town state approval for listing in the National Register of Historic Sites.

Hostesses dressed in silks and laces of pre-Civil War times will conduct tours through eight of the homes, there will be horse-drawn buggies to ride in, stage coach rides, antique horseless carriages, demonstrations of weaving on hand looms, quilting bees, and various craft displays. Proceeds from the tour go to the Weston Historical Museum. Weston is just west of Missouri highway 45 about half-way between Kansas City and St. Joseph.

Lewis and Clark first noted the suitability of the area for a townsite in 1804. The town took its name from Sgt. Tom E. Weston, a dragoon stationed at nearby Ft. Leavenworth, who surveyed the site and laid out plans for the town.

A beautiful deep harbor at the foot of Main Street and ferry crossings one mile south and one mile north made Weston headquarters for both military and civilian supplies for the west.

The town mushroomed from some 300 persons in 1839 to about 5,000 by 1850 as buckskin-clad trappers, traders, speculators, businessmen and planters took up residence in the frontier city.

William F. (Buffalo Bill) Cody played in its streets near the home of his uncle, Elijah Cody, one of the city's leading merchants.

Benjamin Holladay of stagecoach fame was the town's first post-master and another of its leading businessmen. At one time he operated a drug store, a tavern, the International Hotel, a general store and a packing plant that was converted to a distillery in 1856.

As many as eight steamboats docked at one time at the wharf at Weston.

Those early residents survived floods, malaria, typhoid, and cholera, but two major fires, the first in 1850 and the second in 1855, wiped out much of the business district. Rather than rebuild the second time, many of the businessmen decided to move on west. And coupled with the strife created by pro and anti-slavery forces, the bustling city began to fade from prominence.

The great flood of 1881 delivered the final blow. The deep harbor at the foot of Main Street disappeared almost overnight as the Missouri River shifted its main channel more than a mile west parallel to the Kansas bluffs.

But a few of the area farmers and businessmen persisted. Tobacco slowly became the principal crop. The quality and size of the burley was such that by the early 1900s the first and only market for the sale of tobacco west of the Mississippi came into being at Weston. Today tobacco is a $5 to $7 million annual business for the town and its farmers.

The huge warehouses where the annual sales are held are on the site of the old Missouri River channel at the foot of Main Street.

The town's one other major industry is provided by a distillery (McCormick), the oldest in the nation and the only remaining business link with the enterprising Holladay family.

The one-time "Queen of the River," Weston today is more frequently referred to as the "Williamsburg of the West" as her residents demonstrate their pride in her heritage.

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Epileptics Can Live Normally

Dear Dr. Lamb — I am an epileptic. I only get seizures when I forget to take my medication, which I haven't forgotten for a long time. I started getting seizures when I was 12 years old and now I am 21. I would like some information on Pennsylvania laws for driver's licenses. I now have one but different people have asked me how I was allowed to drive a car when I was taking medication for epilepsy. I don't know how to answer them. I had one seizure in the last five years and then I forgot to take my medication.

Also, would you please print some information on drinking. I take Dilantin and phenobarbital. I do not drink at all but I was told that if I ever did, it would cause trouble, because this medication and drinks will not mix. Is it safe to drink and take medication? My mother is a regular reader of your column and she clips and saves all information on epilepsy. So keep up the good work and help people to understand that we learned to live with this disease and we are normal, not people to be feared.

I am a male and you would be surprised to learn that once a girl knows I take medication for epilepsy, she doesn't want to go with me any more.

Dear Reader — All states now issue driver's licenses to individuals who have epilepsy. The standards vary a bit and in some states they require a doctor's certificate but not in all.

The only concern about driving is the question of whether an epileptic will have a seizure or not, and if the person's seizures are well controlled and he hasn't had one for some period of time then he is considered quite safe, not only by the usual state laws but also by the insurance companies that provide automobile insurance for individuals with these problems. Your five years record with no seizures would go a long way towards making you a very safe driver. When you combine this with your statement that you don't drink at all, it makes you a lot safer than a lot of the drunks on the highway. There are many more highway accidents from alcohol than there are from epilepsy.

There are many problems from mixing drugs and alcohol is a drug. Although much is known about its undesirable effects on the human body, less is known about its undesirable effects when it is combined with other drugs. However, a number of the tranquilizers and phenobarbital, mixed with alcohol can even be fatal. You're wise to avoid using alcoholic beverages, and I would make the same recommendation to anyone who has to take tranquilizers, sleeping tablets or any form of anticonvulsive medicine.

No, I wouldn't be surprised about your problem in dating girls. Don't let that stop you. You can look upon it as a way of eliminating a lot of girls who wouldn't be a suitable mate anyway. You wouldn't want to be married to someone whose own prejudice affected her relationship with you. A woman who really loves you will want to share all of your life and problems, whatever they are, just as you will want to do the same with her.

Service Probes Loophole

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service says it is studying whether to close a loophole through which big contributors to this year's presidential campaign have managed to escape paying taxes on gifts of stock.

But the IRS added that any new restrictions in this area would not apply to past contributions.

Officials conceded that both political parties have gained from the loophole, which has permitted contributors to escape paying both gift taxes and capital-gains taxes.

Some large donors have managed to avoid taxes—and so have the two major parties—by making their contributions in stock which has increased in value since purchased.

The stock is divided up into small blocks worth less than $3,000 each and funneled through dummy political corporations into the political coffers. The party or campaign committee then sells the stock at the higher price and nobody pays any tax on the transaction.

The gift-tax law allows a contributor to give $3,000 a year before taxes are paid after a $30,000 lifetime exemption has been exhausted. Setting up a number of dummy organizations and dividing up the blocks of stock permits avoidance of the gift tax.

The capital-gains tax is avoided because political parties have never had to file income tax returns.

"It appears that this practice had its inception and was continued in the belief that virtually all of the receipts of (political) parties were from gifts and that the parties would not have taxable income," the IRS said.

Drunken Driving—But on a Horse?

FORT MORGAN, Colo. (AP) — A 31-year-old woman was arrested in downtown Fort Morgan on charges of drunk driving — on a horse.

Police said Elaine Greene was arrested Monday night after riding a horse through one bar and into another.

Witnesses said it took four police officers to persuade her to dismount. The policemen ended up walking her to jail when she refused to stay in the patrol car, officers said.

She was released after spending a night in jail, police said. Officers did not know what happened to the horse.

Neil Diamond's Music Unique

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — He will step into the spotlight Thursday night, standing where Al Jolson once stood alone, and he'll sing songs so unique he can describe them only as "Neil Diamond music."

To millions of fans the description is magic. Diamond's compositions—"Sweet Caroline," "I Am, I Said," "Stones" and more—have kept him perched at the top of music charts for three years.

The scheduled one-man show at Broadway's Winter Garden Theater in New York, an apex of Diamond's dizzying career rise, is nearly sold out. And it comes just after a triumphant stand at Hollywood's outdoor Greek Theater where fans hung from treetops to get a glimpse of the 30-year-old superstar.

The Schubert Organization, which is bringing Diamond to Broadway, calls him "an American original" and says it's the first time since Jolson that a pop song star has been showcased alone on Broadway. Jolson appeared at the same theater in the 1920s and 1930s.

There will be 20 Diamond performances through Oct. 21, and one show will be beamed by satellite to Europe and Iron Curtain countries. "It's going to be fantastic," exclaims Diamond. "First of all, to be on Broadway, but also at the Winter Garden. I was fired from four or five music publishers in that building!"

The lean, pensive, dark-haired Diamond was reflecting on the tough road to superstardom in a rare interview before leaving for New York. A native of Brooklyn, he now lives in Los Angeles with his wife and small son.

"I went through seven years of total failure," he recalls. "My average income was $300 per year. ... But it was exciting."

I was learning that there was a way in which I could express myself."

The difficult past still lives in the subdued elegance of Diamond's Hollywood office where his first small press notice hangs beside his Brooklyn junior high school class picture. The solemn 12-year-old in the picture was already writing poems, "practical poetry, mostly to girls. I used to ask girls on dates that way."

One of two sons of a shopkeeper, Diamond recalls an insecure childhood of constant moves to new towns. "I was an outsider for the most part in each new school. But I always wanted to be something. That's why I took to writing so passionately."

When the Diamond family moved to Cheyenne, Wyo., Neil first started putting his words to music. "I got involved in country music," he recalls. "I realized that the cowboys who were singing were getting the girls."

His seven years of failure were spent in New York, composing songs on a $30 piano and peddling them to publishers who didn't buy.

Finally, the first breakthrough came. A songwriting-record production team spotted him and offered him his first recording contract. The record,

Group Will Meet

The Northside Citizens Association will hold its regular business meeting at 8 p.m. Friday at Quinn Chapel AME Church, 512 West Johnson. The organization recently held a farewell dinner in honor of Mrs. Louvenia Hammonds, 421 West Johnson, a long-time member, who is leaving Sedalia to make her home in St. Louis.

"Cherry Cherry" backed with "Solitary Man," attracted immediate attention. Success had arrived.

By 1970, he was named the top-selling male singer on record. Since then, he has had five best-selling albums, several single-record hits and has performed to wild ovations in the great concert halls of the world.

Ministers Explain Job Obligations to Lions Club

Two local clergymen addressed the Wednesday noon luncheon meeting of the Sedalia Lions Club, describing the modern day concept of the role of the "clergy person." Dr. Thomas Hall, pastor of the Wesley United Methodist Church and the Rev. Dennis Craft, pastor of the First United Methodist Church, were the speakers introduced by the Rev. John Thornberry.

Mr. Hall told the group one could no longer call members of the ministry clergymen. He said they are more commonly known as clergy persons now. With the change in name also came a change in role, according to Hall, as he spoke disclaiming the image of the "holy Joe" and that ministers are "kept" by their congregations.

Mr. Craft explained the multiple functions of a modern clergy person. He said he is a preacher, a rabbi, a teacher, pastor, a minister, an administrator or a priest.

Mr. Craft said a clergy person has to be all of these regardless of what he is called and then outlined how much of his time is spent on the different jobs in a typical week. The clergy person spends 55 per cent of his or her time as an administrator; 20 per cent as a pastor; 10 per cent preaching and preparing the sermon; 10 per cent as a teacher and five per cent performing the rites of the church. He noted that the average clergy person spends about 3,000 hours per year at his work, which breaks down to something around a 60 hour week.

In order to attain this "kept" existence the clergy person must finish four years of college, three years of seminary and a year internship before being assigned a church in the Methodist faith, Mr. Craft said.

Club president, Bob Maxwell, presided at the meeting. Jack Robinson was the guest of Don King.

Abortion statute is upheld by court

The Missouri Supreme Court deserves a vote of thanks for its decision upholding the state's abortion law.

On Tuesday the court ruled 6 to 1 that the state statute on abortion is constitutional, thereby overturning a St. Louis County Circuit Court decision that held the law to be invalid.

The statute permits abortions only when the life of the mother is endangered.

Of course, the final word on abortion remains to be resolved by the U.S. Supreme Court, which will hear arguments this year, a fact the Missouri Court took due note of. Partly for this reason the Missouri Supreme Court was not inclined to anticipate that decision.

The law was challenged by several physicians for being vague and unclear, and by other persons who saw it as a violation of the rights of privacy and due process of law. It was even claimed that the statute represents an "establishment of religion"

The decision released Tuesday is perhaps most notable for the pre-trial agreements reached prior to going into court. Both sides in the case stipulated that "human life is a continuum from conception to death."

Now this is a remarkable statement to come from the mouths of pro-abortionists. They are usually more inclined to view a human embryo as mere "tissue" or something — anything — instead of a live human being. This despite the fact that the unborn child is basically formed in all respects only six and one half weeks after conception.

The course America follows on the question of abortion will, ultimately, be decided in court. But we would again emphasize that, beyond mere legality, the issue involves morality, in the deepest sense of that word.

We would suspect that the six Missouri Supreme Court judges who voted as they did were not unmindful of that aspect of the case.

"SARGE, SOMEBODY OILED THE TRACK INSTEAD OF THE WHEELS."

Art Buchwald Henry controls market

WASHINGTON — As everyone knows, Henry Kissinger has an overwhelming effect on America's foreign policy. But what wasn't recognized until recently is that he also seems to be responsible for the health of the stock market.

Buchwald

A broker friend on Wall Street named Jeckel told me, "It's now a Kissinger Market. The prices of stocks go up and down depending on how Wall Street reads Kissinger."

"Remember last week the market was down. Then Kissinger flew off to Paris to meet with the North Vietnamese. The market went up. He was supposed to stay for 24 hours. When he extended the stay, the market went up again. When he came back, he was smiling at the airport; the market went up."

"Then he was photographed a day later walking out of the White House frowning. Immediately the market went down."

"You mean the brokers are now buying and selling depending on Kissinger's mood?"

"Right. We no longer watch the ticker tape. We all stay glued to the TV hoping to get a glimpse of Henry."

One of Jeckel's partners came over to the desk. He was carrying a newspaper. "What do you make of this?" Jeckel looked at a photograph on the front page. It was a picture of Henry with a beautiful blonde attending a concert.

"He looks pretty happy," Jeckel said. "I think we ought to advise our clients to buy."

"But wait a minute," the partner said. "Is he happy because he's with the blonde, or is he happy because he's got a peace deal cooking with Hanoi?"

Jeckel picked up the magnifying glass and studied the photograph. "It's the same grin he used when he got off the plane from Paris. I think it's a peace grin."

The partner turned to me. "You know Kissinger. Does he look like he got something out of his Paris trip, or does he look like he's just looking forward to a nice evening?"

I borrowed the magnifying glass. "It's hard to say. I've seen Kissinger grinning like that when he came back from Paris empty-handed. Sometimes he hates to show his feelings. At the same time he may have made some progress with the North Vietnamese and none with the blonde."

Jeckel said, "I think we should put in an order for IBM, Eastman Kodak and American Airlines, just in case."

The partner said, "It's pretty risky on the basis of a newspaper photograph. If we could see him on TV we could get a better idea of his mood."

One of the security analysts came rushing in. "Have you seen the afternoon editions? Here's a picture of Kissinger with President Nixon!"

The two brokers grabbed the paper. "Oh, my God, Henry's frowning," Jeckel said.

"But Nixon is grinning," the partner said. "How do you read that?"

I studied the picture. "The way I read it, Kissinger didn't get a deal in Paris and he had no luck with the blonde, either. Nixon probably thinks the second part of that is very funny."

Jeckel picked up his phone and shouted into it "SELL! SELL! SELL!"

Merry-go-round Envoy of Burger works against bill

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court is supposed to rule on laws after they're passed, not meddle with them while they're still before Congress. Yet, Chief Justice Warren Burger sent an envoy a few weeks ago to urge House Speaker Carl Albert to water down the products safety bill.

This would protect consumers from dangerous products. Burger fears it would also overload the federal courts with new cases.

The chief justice, therefore, dispatched Rowland Kirks, the stuffy chief administrator of the federal courts, up to Capitol Hill to talk to Albert. Kirks was accompanied, astonishingly, by one of Washington's most engaging special pleaders, Tom "Tommy the Cork" Corcoran, who has clients opposed to the products safety bill.

For months, Burger has been grumbling about all the new laws that are being passed. He complained in 1970 to the American Bar Association: "Not a week passes without speeches in Congress and elsewhere and editorials demanding new laws — to control pollution, for example, and new laws allowing class actions by consumers to protect the public from greedy and unscrupulous producers and sellers." This was clogging the courts, he grumped.

He hammered on the same theme again a few weeks ago during a return engagement before the bar association. He expressed an urgent need "to have Congress carefully scrutinize all legislation that will create more cases."

Putting his words into action, he sent Kirks four days later to lobby with Speaker Albert against the products safety bill. "Tommy the Cork," as charming an Irishman as ever practiced the art of political persuasion, volunteered to serve as Kirks' guide.

When my associate Les Whitten called Kirks to ask about his lobbying mission, Kirks snapped: "I have nothing to say on this matter."

"Does this mean you are denying it?" asked Whitten.

"I am not going to say anything about this," Kirks repeated.

"But you are a public servant," pressed Whitten, "and the public has a right to know about this intervention."

"I don't want to be impolite, Mr. Whitten," said Kirks firmly, "but the conversation is at an end." And he hung up the phone.

Corcoran was more candid. He acknowledged that he had taken Kirks in to see Speaker Albert. "Kirks, acting for the chief justice, asked me to take him to see the Speaker," said Corcoran.

Although the drug interests have been leading the fight against the products safety bill and Corcoran has drug clients, he said he had explained he had accompanied Kirks as a friend. "I have known Kirks for years," he said.

As Albert recalled the visit, Corcoran had done most of the talking. "Corcoran argued that the products safety bill would clutter the courts, and Kirks would say 'yes,'" the Speaker told us. He said he had not intervened, as they had requested, to weaken the bill.

While the chief justice has been lobbying to keep public interest cases out of the federal courts, a confidential memo from Associate Justice Lewis Powell calls upon the U.S. Chamber of Commerce to hire a staff of lawyers to bring special interest cases before the courts.

"The judiciary," he wrote shortly before his appointment to the Supreme Court last year, "may be the most important instrument for social, economic and political change... Labor unions, civil rights groups and now the public interest law firms are extremely active in the judicial arena."

"Their success, often at business' expense, has not been inconsequential. This is a vast area of opportunity for the Chamber, if it is willing to undertake the role of spokesman for American business and if, in turn, business is willing to provide the funds."

It looks as if the Warren Burger court may be more interested in encouraging special interest than public interest cases.

Editor's mail Columnists disgust her

I was disgusted by the editorial page in the Oct. 1 paper. Why supposedly intelligent men make fools of themselves by depreciating someone else is beyond me. Poking fun at a man who has the fortitude to stand behind his beliefs is not my idea of "expressing oneself."

It seems to me those columnists are criticizing George McGovern for not being a "politician's politician," and rather being what this country needs — a statesman. I admire any person who stands for his beliefs and I respect the right of each individual to form his own opinions. That is the only "mistake" George McGovern has made. Evidently these columnists don't respect this right, or maybe they wrote their columns in a moment of insanity.

Whatever their reasons, I think it's pitiful that the paper prints such tasteless, biased articles. The editorial page has ceased to be intelligent, and has taken on the form of a funny paper — without much humor.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

Leaves will soon be changing colors throughout major portions of the United States. The leaves change color because of pigments in their chlorophyll. The World Almanac notes. Carotene and xanthophyll are pigments that turn leaves yellow and orange. Red and purple are caused by pigments called anthocyanins.

A conservative view

No straddling in this platform

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — A vast deal has been written of the platforms of the Democratic and Republican parties, but little or nothing has been said of the platform of the American Party. This is fair enough. Deprived of George C. Wallace, the American Party abruptly has run out of steam. It counts for little in this year's election. But, gentlemen, its party platform is a knockout.

Kilpatrick

The Democratic platform evoked one image—the image of a long-haired lad in Union Square, whooping it up for share — the wealth. The Republican platform evoked another image: a long-winded senator addressing the Westchester women.

The American Party platform evokes other images altogether — bowling lanes and porch swings, revival tents and sawdust trails, Legion halls and county fairs. Here nothing is ambiguous; nothing demands interpretation. The major party platforms had their soft spots; they tended to curl around some difficult points. The American Party platform hits like a pool cue.

It opens with a prayer. Can you imagine that? The idea never occurred to the major parties — but it occurred to the American Party which "gratefully acknowledges the Lord God as the Creator, Preserver, and Ruler of the Universe and of the Nation, and appeals to Him for aid, comfort, and continuing guidance..."

The preamble continues: "The average man today does not think of himself in ideological terms, such as liberal and conservative. Rather, the average man thinks in terms of the basic problems which confront him. He is concerned with the opportunity for gainful employment, educational opportunity for his children, the safety of his wife and child on the streets of his community, and equity in taxation which makes him neither the victim of those who by refusing to work have no income to tax, or the multimillionaires who use tax loopholes to avoid the payment of any taxes. He is concerned about the never-ending use of his sons for gunfodder in futile international involvements."

Now, that passage might offend the women's liberationists, and the crack at multimillionaires has its demagogic aspects, but this is plain speech.

The plain speech goes on. The American Party platform expresses "total commitment" to the Constitution; the major parties gave the Constitution, poor thing, no more than a lick and a promise. The American Party wants no truck with equal employment by law: "We shall steadfastly oppose Federal legislation permitting the Federal bureaucracy to tell a business man who he must hire or fire."

The party stands four-square for capital punishment, Nationalist China, private medicine, prayer in schools, and recognition of Rhodesia. It stands four-square against gun control, amnesty, the U.N., liberalized abortion, legalized marijuana, the Equal Rights Amendment, and any sort of payment to able-bodied persons who refuse to work.

The Republican platform pussy-footed around the question of gold: The GOP recommended that convertibility merely Arthur Robinson of Philadelphia has been one of the world's greatest players for many years. Here we see him discovering East's queen of diamonds just as surely as Columbus discovered America in 1492. It was an important team match and Bobby Jordan put Arthur in a slightly optimistic grand slam. Arthur decided quite properly that he wanted to find the best play for his contract and was not interested in playing safe so as not to go down more than one trick. He cashed two spades two hearts and two clubs and the second club brought some real information. East showed out!

This club unbalance indicated the great desirability of playing East for the queen of diamonds but Arthur wanted a sure thing. He cashed the last high spade and last high heart and West followed to both. That accounted for 12 of West's cards. He couldn't have more than one diamond. A diamond to dummy's king picked up West's nine-spot and the proved finesse against East's queen brought in the grand slam. Easy when you see it here. Arthur made it just as easy at the table.

Royals Close Municipal Gates With 4-0 Win

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Ted Williams and Bob Lemon sang their managerial swan songs Wednesday night ... at least for the present and Williams probably forever.

Williams, the Texas skipper whose team carved the worst record in baseball, announced his retirement late last week. Lemon, the boss of the Kansas City Royals, was fired Tuesday.

Lemon sounded the loudest parting shot. The Royals defeated Texas 4-0 on Roger Nelson's two-hit pitching in a game in which nothing was at stake except pride.

The departing songs the two managers warbled were of highly contrasting keys and pitches.

Williams, manager of the transplanted Texas Rangers four seasons, said in a happy-go-lucky voice that he was "going fishing." Lemon, who took over the Royals in June 1970, smiled slightly and said he was "going job hunting."

Actually, it was a night of goodbyes. The Royals said farewell to staid Municipal Stadium. General Manager Cedric Tallis was given the key to the Royals' new showplace in the Harry S. Truman sports complex during pregame ceremonies.

When they went out to home plate to give their line-ups to the umpire, Williams and Lemon joked with each other for long moments while a barrage of radio and television people recorded their remarks for posterity.

Williams, who still has a year on his contract, will not leave the Texas organization.

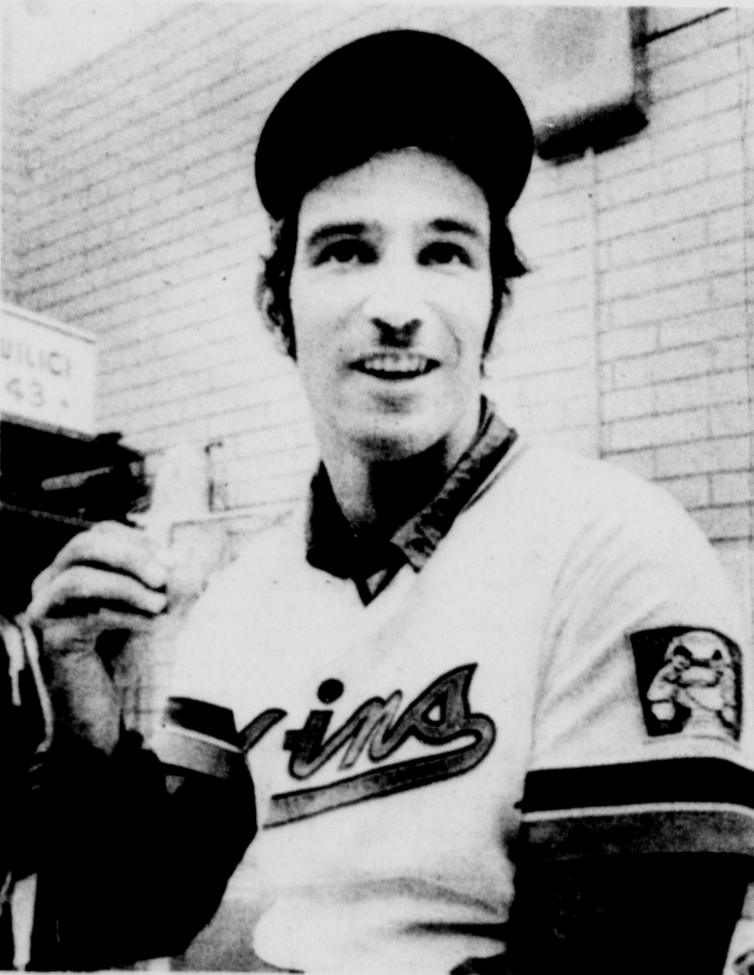

"I'll be around and help them some ways," he said, "like the free agent draft. I'll miss a lot of this but I'm not sad about leaving. I never wanted to be a manager but I've got to say I enjoyed it."

"Fishing? I may be the best fisherman there is."

Lemon minced no words about his desire for the future.

"I want to manage in the majors," he said.

Williams' job at Texas is open. There are rumors Del Rice may not be retained as manager of the California Angels which would be ideal for Lemon, who lives in, Long Beach, Calif.

Twins Rehire Quilici

"I'm thrilled," said Minnesota Twins' manager Frank Quilici after he was rehired for another season, Wednesday, by the Twins' organization. Quilici said his goal for the 1973 campaign will be to get the Twins back into the thick of the American League western division race. (UPI)

The Smith-Cotton Tigers host Mexico in the 1972 Homecoming game Friday night at Jennie Jaynes Stadium, as the Bengals seek to push their season's mark above the .500 mark once again.

The Bulldogs, who dropped out of the Central Missouri Conference at the end of the 1971 campaign, have fashioned a 3-1 record in their first four outings, losing only to Jefferson City Helias, 12-0, three weeks ago.

The Tigers and the Bulldogs have had only one common opponent—Fulton. Mexico clipped Fulton with a field goal in the 1972 opener, 3-0, while the Tigers needed a late field goal in their win as well over the Hornets, 16-14.

Mexico has rolled up two straight impressive wins since their loss to Helias. Last week they downed Hannibal, 27-6, and blasted Kirksville the week before, 34-0.

S-C is 2-2 following last week's 14-13 heartbreaking loss in Jefferson City.

The Tim Hotop-Joe Long passing combination is one of the highlights of this year's Mexico team. Hotop hit Long for two touchdowns in last year's S-C-Mexico contest and led the Bulldogs to a 21-6 win over the Tigers.

"This (the passing of Hotop and the receiving of Long) is one of the areas that we have to concentrate on," said head Smith-Cotton coach Greg Cook Wednesday afternoon as he sent his charges through their paces on the practice field.

"We also are going to have to concentrate on a couple of other areas," he added. "Last year, when they needed key yardage they went off tackle or up the 'gut' ... we'll have to shut them off there too," he concluded.

The Bulldogs figure to be more of a running threat than going to the air, however, Cook still remembers the two TD's that Hotop threw to Long in the 1971 contest.

Last week, Mexico rolled up 299 yards on the ground against Hannibal. They threw for only 38, connecting on three of eight attempts.

From the Tigers standpoint, Friday night's contest is a very important one. They can ill afford to have a let-down, following

Jeff City, Kewps Game Tops Card

This is only the fourth full week of high school football in Missouri and already some important conference contests are on area schedules.

Key games in six of the area's eight conferences are slated for Friday night.

Probably the most important game finds Jefferson City at Columbia Hickman, where the Kewpies will be out to clear their memories of last year's 14-13 loss in Jefferson City.

The contest is the first league game of the season for Columbia, but the last for the Jays, who have only to win it to post their 14th CMC championship in the last 15 years.

Columbia, who got off to a rough start, losing to Jefferson City Helias in their opener, has shown steady improvement in running their overall mark to 3-1, had a 13-0 halftime lead in the 1971 Jefferson City-Kewpies' contest.

But the Jays rallied for 14 second-half points, won the game and the CMC title as well.

Jefferson City blasted Hannibal in their conference opener, 50-0, and edged Sedalia Smith-Cotton, 14-13, last week.

But the Jays and the Kewpies have to share this week's spotlight with many other area teams.

First of all, there's a game in the West Central Conference that pits two of the front-runners against each other.

Holden, who hasn't won the WCC championship in, well, heaven knows when, plays host to the Pleasant Hill Roosters.

Holden is 2-0 in league play, while Pleasant Hill stands at 3-0.

There's also an I-70 Conference tilt in Warrensburg, that finds undefeated University High of Warrensburg hosting another undefeated team—St. Paul's (Concordia).

The two will take blemished 4-0 overall marks into the contest. In addition, each is 3-0 in the conference.

Jefferson City Helias, who has rolled up four straight wins, including that impressive victory in their season's debut against Columbia Hickman, faces their first Mid-State Conference foe of the season—Rolla.

Rolla is 1-1 in the five-team loop, and trails Waynesville, who is 1-0.

Waynesville will be out to make it two in a row in the conference as they host Lebanon. Lebanon, like Helias, will be opening their conference slate.

Drexel and Rich Hill should provide west central-Missourians with plenty of action, when they clash in Rich Hill.

Both have spotless Western Missouri Conference records

Will Televisify Virtually All Playoff Games

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Broadcasting Company will televisify virtually all of the American and National League baseball playoff games beginning Saturday.

An NBC spokesman said Wednesday night that the first NL playoff game, Cincinnati at Pittsburgh Saturday, would be nationally televised at 1 p.m. EDT, followed at 4 p.m. by the opening AL game between Oakland and Detroit at Oakland.

Sunday, only the Detroit at Oakland game will be televised, starting at 4 p.m.

On Monday, with the AL teams idle, game No. 3 in the NL series will be televised from Cincinnati, starting at 3 p.m.

Tuesday, the AL game at Detroit will be televised at 1:30 p.m., and if the best-of-five NL series is not yet settled, game four will be televised at 3 p.m. However, the spokesman said that only portions of the NL game would be shown until the AL game is completed, then the rest of the Pittsburgh-Cincinnati game will be shown.

The same procedure will be followed Wednesday—if both series have not been decided. And if a fifth AL game is needed, it will be televised at 1:30 p.m. Thursday in Detroit.

their 14-13 setback in Jefferson City, especially with four of their final five games on the road.

Junior signal-caller Paul Kostopolus will start at quarterback for the Bengals. His performance in last week's Jefferson City contest has given him the nod over sophomore Rick McRoy.

The Tigers backfield will remain the same with senior left halfback Tom Bloess, the team's leading rusher, anchoring the attack.

Teaming with him will be his sophomore counterpart on the right side—Marvin Spruell, and fullback Mike Boggs, a junior.

The Bengals emerged from their game last week with the Jays with virtually no injuries. However, the future performance of senior placekicker Jim Downing hinges on a leg injury.

Other minor bumps and bruises were sustained by wide receiver Rick Carter and safety Jack Cook. Carter has been nursing a shoulder injury all season, while Cook has been hobbling since the Jays' battle.

The Tigers' mentor is optimistic that everyone will be ready by Friday night's 8 p.m. kickoff.

Pete Kostopolus, who had to bypass last week's contest, is back and will probably see duty at both tight end and the defensive front.

During Mexico's 15-year stay in the Central Missouri Conference before dropping out, the Tigers and the Bulldogs played even. Each won seven games, while one ended in a tie.

Overall, the teams have met 17 times. Both have won eight, including the one tie.

The Tigers' next opponent will be Hannibal, Oct. 13. That game will be played on the Pirates' field.

Manager Billy Martin couldn't ask for much more except for his Detroit Tigers to win the American League pennant and the World Series.

Martin, whose Tigers clinched the AL East flag with a 3-1 victory over Boston Tuesday—ending a tense division pennant scramble—had his contract, reportedly worth $65,000 and due to expire after the 1973 season, extended Wednesday for one year.

Boston Manager Eddie Kasko, who had been on the way out before his faltering Red Sox unleashed a late-season charge and finished just one-half game behind Detroit, was rehired for two years with a $10,000 increase, boosting his salary to $60,000.

Announcement of the two contracts was made just before Boston defeated Detroit 4-1 Wednesday in their final game of the year.

Also on Wednesday, Minnesota, which secured third place in the AL West by crushing the Chicago White Sox 14-2, gave Manager Frank Quilici a contract for the 1973 season, and the Cleveland Indians rehired Ken Aspromonte for at least two more seasons.

Martin, who earlier had rejected a one-year extension, later changed his mind and said:

"I got the money I wanted, so I'm very happy. It was either a longer term or more money. I got the money."

Kasko's job appeared shaky before the Red Sox rallied after the All-Star break and charged into first place, a position they ultimately lost to Detroit.

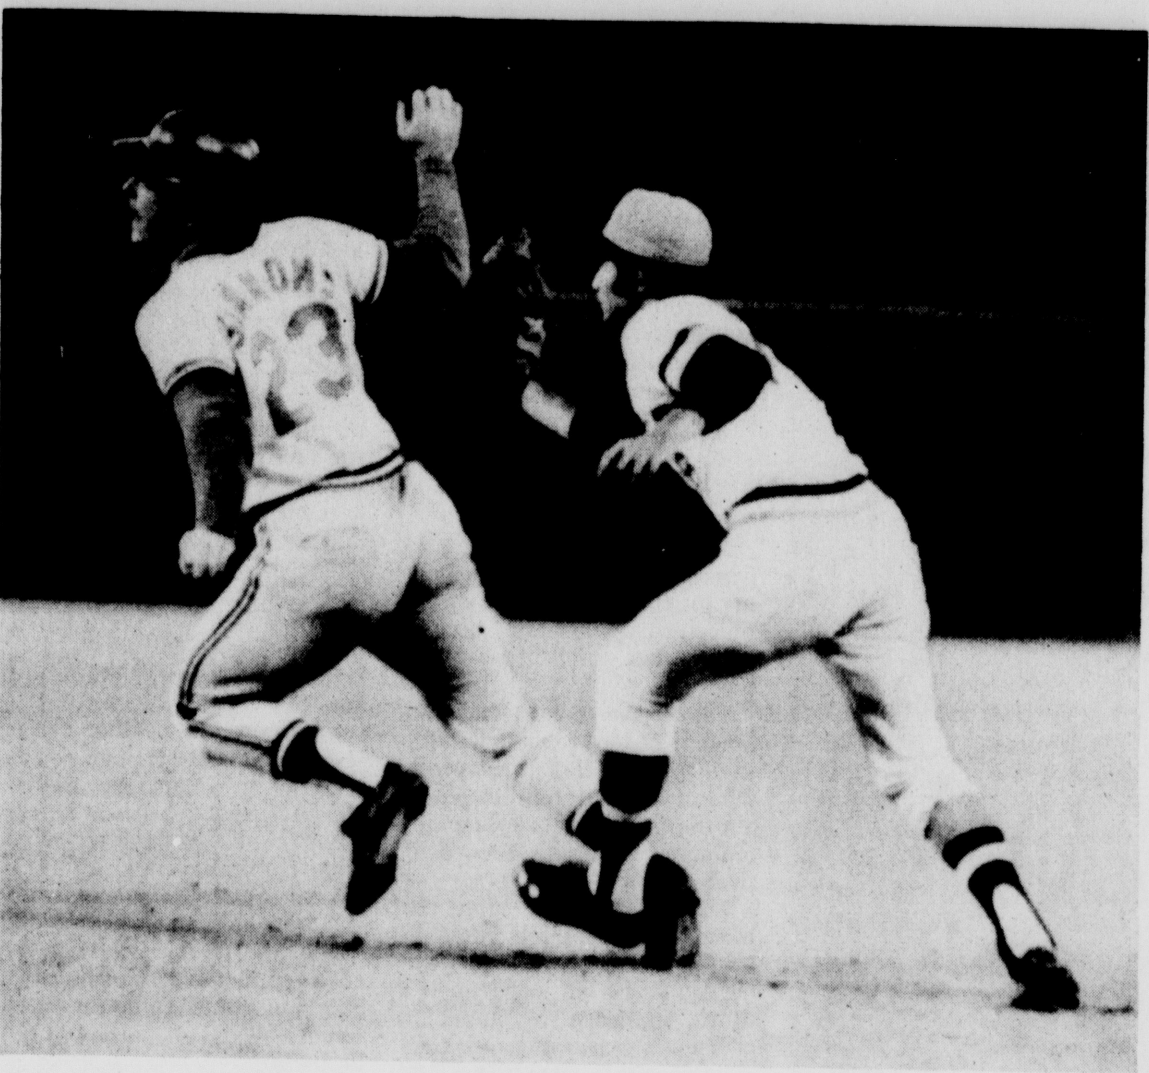

"I'm real pleased with the contract and very pleased with the way our ball club came on in the last couple of months," Kasko said. "It was enlightening the way we came on and I foresee a bright future."

Terms of Quilici's one-year contract were not announced but his salary was believed to be about $30,000. He led the Twins to a 41-43 record after replacing Bill Rigney on July 6 and is the fifth manager in six years to work under Owner Calvin Griffith.

"There should be some changes made as far as personnel is concerned," said Quilici. "We can't be content with the kind of pitching we have. We have to be concerned with defense."

Although the Indians finished below .500 for the fourth consecutive season with a 72-84 record, they posted 12 more victories than in 1971 while finishing fifth in the AL East.

The club refused to reveal financial terms of Aspromonte's contract, but said it was a "multi-year contract."

Friday in Hannibal

S-C After Third Straight Title

Defending Central Missouri Conference cross country champion Smith-Cotton puts their title on the line in Hannibal Friday in the CMC League meet.

S-C, who has captured two straight league championships will be joined by host Hannibal, Columbia and for the first time Jefferson City, who established a cross country program only this year.

In their three previous meets, the Tigers have finished first only once. That came in their third-annual invitational meet at Elm Hills Golf Course. There they nailed down first with 49 points. Jefferson City finished second with 79 points.

In the balance of their competition to date, S-C captured eighth in the Raytown South Invitational and sixth last week in the Marshall Invitational.

The Bengals finished ahead of CMC rival Jefferson City and Columbia Hickman in last week's competition at Marshall. The Jays placed seventh in the team standings, while Columbia wound up in eighth.

The meet is scheduled to get underway at 4 p.m.

Nixon Endorses Bill

Rozelle Opposes Ban on Blackouts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Football League has said there is no such thing as a television blackout, then went on record as opposing a bill that would lift the blackout for pro football fans.

"NFL home territories are no longer blacked out on television on Sunday afternoons even when the home team is playing a game at home," NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle told a Senate subcommittee Wednesday.

A bill eliminating local blackouts of home games "does not deal with blackouts," Rozelle said. "It is an effort to prescribe by statute which NFL games must be telecast in what area on what occasions."

Rozelle, accompanied by three NFL team executives, was joined in opposing the measure by Walter Kennedy, National Basketball Association commissioner; Robert Carlson, American Basketball Association president; and Don Ruck, vice president of the National Hockey League.

Two witnesses, both identifying themselves as football fans, supported the bill that would allow home games to be televised locally if they are sold out 48 hours before the contest is to begin.

The three-day hearing ends today with several witnesses, including Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, Dean Burch, Federal Communications Commission chairman; Roone Arledge, president of ABC Sports; John A. Schneider, president of CBS Broadcast Group; and David Foster, president of the National Cable Television Association Inc.

The NFL commissioner said only nine teams—the Cincinnati Bengals, Chicago Bears, Green Bay Packers, Minnesota Vikings, New York Giants, New York Jets, Philadelphia Eagles, Washington Redskins and Denver Broncos—are sold out for their remaining games of the 1972 season.

Robin Ficker of Silver Spring, Md., who identified himself as president of a Redskins fan club, said the Skins' 53,000 season tickets are purchased by only 13,569 persons or corporations.

Ficker asked the subcommittee to amend the bill to allow no one to purchase more than two season tickets "until everyone who wants two season tickets has them."

Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I., co-sponsor of the bill and chairman of the subcommittee, said President Nixon has endorsed the bill and wants to see it passed before Congress adjourns.

"I'll tell you how serious this has become," Pastore said. "This has become a national crisis."

Developments in training camps of Big Eight football teams Wednesday included:

Kansas — Coach Don Fambrough thinks that because Colorado and Nebraska of the Big Eight Conference walloped Minnesota the last two weekends, the Gophers will be out for revenge when the Jayhawks go to Minneapolis Saturday. "I know if we had been beaten the last two weeks by Big Ten teams, I'd want to regain a little of my prestige," he said. Split end Emmett Edwards will miss the Minnesota game due to an ankle sprain.

Missouri — Coach Al Onofrio sees no backfield changes for the Tigers' Big Eight opener at Oklahoma State. That means it will be quarterback John Cherry, fullback Ray Bybee and halfbacks Tommy Reamon and Bill Zeigler. Onofrio said Mizou might practice inside the Hearn multipurpose building today to get used to artificial turf similar to that the Tigers will be playing on Saturday.

Oklahoma State — Coach Dave Smith indicated respect for Missouri's defense and concentrated on the kicking game. The Tigers, who are fifth nationally against the rush, have allowed only 78 yards a game this season. They will be a tough test for the Cowboys who have averaged 410 yards per game and are ranked second in the nation.

Kansas State — Coach Vince Gibson said the Wildcats' Big Eight opener against Colorado "will be an extreme challenge for us," noting the Buffaloes are "a physically tough football team." He said to defeat CU "We have to stop their option. If you can't do that, you can't beat Colorado."

Colorado — Coach Eddie Crowder said linebacker Randy Geist is lost for the season because of damaged nerves suffered in practice. Sophomore Bobby Hunt is slated to move into Geist's spot. Fullback Bo Matthews is a doubtful starter against Kansas State because of a bruised knee.

Iowa State, Nebraska, and Oklahoma are idle this week-end and had only light drills.

“If electricity is so cheap,
why is my light bill
so high?”

For years we've been telling you that electricity is your family's biggest bargain.

But recently, you've been asking us why your light bills seem so high. Well, here's our answer:

If your light bills seem higher than they used to be, it's mainly because your family is using more electricity.

If you're average, you use four times as much electricity as you—or your parents—used in 1952.

And since 1952, the cost of electricity has inflated only 33%, while the cost of many goods and services has doubled, even tripled.

So, considering how much electricity you use. And how cheap it really is. Your light bills aren't really so high after all.

New Management Plan Is Tested At Harvard

Editor's Note—This is the first of two articles on the new management plan at Harvard University, a plan that university officials feel has wide application to other universities.

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Universities seldom have won honors for financial acumen or administrative know-how, despite their other intellectual qualities.

They have done a certain amount of long-range planning, says Stephen Hall, vice president of Harvard, but “in general, they haven't been too intelligent about how they used their money.”

When Hall was hired to handle a $40-million administrative budget early last year he found his 10 departments using “municipal accounting,” or spending against a set sum and hoping to have something left.

His inheritance, Hall said, was an elaborate system for keeping track of costs, of accounting for money already spent, but with less emphasis on plotting the most effective use of the money in achieving university goals.

“Only one department broke down its budget on a monthly basis,” said Hall, a former director of operations support at ITT-Sheraton. Without such a breakdown, progress couldn't be monitored or corrections begun.

Hall now claims that these same department heads have become so financially aware and proficient that, as a team, “they could go into many a large corporation and effect a 100 per cent improvement.”

Moreover, he added, Harvard would like to share its knowledge with other universities. “We'll all come out better off if we do. We're all in the same business.”

The Harvard administrative plan began to take shape with weekly staff meetings of Hall and the administrators, whose responsibilities ranged from the university press to food services to buildings and grounds, and so on.

From these meetings — strictly limited to one early morning hour because “staff meetings fail if they are strung out” — Hall and the administrators began working out a written management plan made up of seven basic elements.

The first of these in the current management plan, the mission, is always stated in one sentence. This, Hall feels, forces each administrator to define sharply the contribution his department should make to the university.

Next, each administrator lists the scope of his job, the parameters of his responsibility, and lists also the amount that should be required to maintain that scope. Assumptions underlying the budget also are listed.

In food services, for example, G. Graham Hurlburt assumes, among other things, “that the cost of raw food will increase 7 per cent.”

The next element is called “future impact,” and it includes all those contingencies that might impact the plan. In this category, Hurlburt lists

“union negotiations—spring 1973. Pressure will be on the side of higher wages.”

Following that, objectives are listed, both for the immediate year and for the next five. “To effectively integrate the combined work forces of Harvard and Radcliffe,” is one near-term objective.

There follows a summation, in which the administrator verbalizes his concerns and hopes. The final section includes the usual charts, “but now they are tied into a system that makes them meaningful.”

Before the final draft of the management plan is printed, Hall sits down individually with the administrators for a head to head, adversary discussion of the contents. These may last four hours. Sometimes there are several meetings.

Although these sessions can be blunt and grating, Hall claims that when the two men leave the room they leave behind their frictions, that they have reached a consensus, and that they are both committed to a common goal.

“This is where many institutions, corporations included, fail,” he said. “They call it management by objectives but what they mean is that they set the objectives and you get fired if you don't meet them.”

Instead, “we negotiate objectives and we both become committed to them. Negotiation leads to total commitment.”

It is from this management book that Hall obtains the overall view of his operations. It is the basis also for a monthly progress report that is submitted to the president and the administrative visiting committee.

Final Welfare Decision From Senate Is Nearing

By JOE HALL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — After shelving the key question of welfare reform for as long as eight years, the Senate is moving toward a final decision on the massive Social Security-welfare bill.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., manager of the 969-page measure, said the Senate is over the hump on the bill and may be able to pass it tonight. But he said it is more likely the final vote will come Friday.

The fight over the most heavily contested part of the bill was settled Wednesday with a decision not to put any of three rival welfare-reform plans into effect but to provide for tests of all them.

This could mean that no effective reform will take place for as much as eight years, if, as expected the House goes along with the test idea.

Meanwhile, the costly and rapidly expanding program of aid to families with dependent children will continue pretty much as at present.

The AFDC rolls have tripled in the past 10 years, and it is this program that most often is cited by critics of "the welfare mess."

In voting 46 to 40 for the amendment by Sen. William V. Roth Jr., R-DeL., to test the three plans, the Senate junked the welfare program which evolved from many months of work in the Senate Finance Committee.

This would have required many of the parents now on the AFDC rolls, mostly mothers, to trade their welfare checks for jobs under a new federal agency.

However, the Senate in a long series of votes retained some peripheral provisions dealing with welfare families in the Finance Committee bill.

They would set up a big new day-care program to make it possible for more welfare mothers to go to work; provide work bonuses and wage supplements to try to induce welfare recipients to take jobs and employers to hire them; and create broad authority for prosecutors to try to find runaway fathers and make them support their families.

Besides workfare, the plans tested under the Roth amendment would be President Nixon's family-assistance Plan, which twice has passed the House, and a liberalized version of that plan sponsored by Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn.

The tests would be worked out and supervised by the Health, Education and Welfare Department.

City Is Blamed For Crime Rate

ST. LOUIS (AP) — "Intensive urbanization" was blamed Wednesday for St. Louis County Police Department statistics showing a 15.7 per cent growth in crime between August of 1971 and the same month this year.

Gus O. Nations Jr., acting chairman of the county's Board of Police Commissioners, called the increase "a consequence of the intensive urbanization of the unincorporated county."

The increase in unincorporated sections of the county was reported at 17.8 per cent. Ranking first among major crimes committed during the month was burglary.

Kidney Surgery Reported

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two operations in which a diseased kidney was removed, repaired, then returned to the human body were reported by a medical school official to the American College of Surgeons today.

Unlike kidney transplants, there is no danger of tissue rejection from a poor match when a person's own kidney is fixed and put back, Russell L. Lawson of the University of Oregon Medical School told the ACS's 58th Clinical Congress here.

The diseased kidney is placed in an iced saline bath allowing the surgeon six to eight hours for slow, meticulous repair without damage to kidney function, Russell said the process also allows for correction of defects in area that otherwise would not be amenable to surgery, he said.

"The concept of removal of the kidney to accomplish surgical repair of blood vessels could also be extended to such problems as questionable kidney tumors where the kidney can be removed from the patient, carefully examined, and then placed back in the patient if a tumor is not found in the substance of the kidney," Lawson said.

The two successful removal and return operations were performed on a 31-year-old man who was admitted to the hospital with blood in the urine, and a 21-year-old woman who had a five-year history of severe hypertension, he said.

Defends Cattle Practice

(Democrat-Capital Service)

JEFFERSON CITY — State Auditor Christopher Bond would let the crippling disease, undulant fever, spread under his recent interpretation of the brucellosis eradication laws, the Missouri Cattleman's Association has charged.

The charges of Bill Sidwell, president of the MCA, came on the heels of criticisms by the state auditor in regard to the manner which the state veterinarian, Dr. George Stiles, has conducted the state's disease eradication program.

The crux of the criticisms were based upon an obsolete brucellosis eradication law which was overlooked when legislators revised the livestock disease eradication statutes in 1959. "These allocations made by the state auditor are incorrect based upon later passed legislation which should supersede the older out-moded law," Sidwell said.

Under the revised statutes, the state veterinarian has been able to reduce the amount of brucellosis from a rampant 8 per cent to less than 1/2 of one per cent, Sidwell said. "This would not have been possible under the old law because the industry would not have been willing to absorb the monetary loss of the reduced indemnity payments, nor would veterinarians have been able to isolate and control exposed animals which were showing no infection symptoms," he added.

Undulant fever, a crippling disease of young and old, is caused by the brucellosis organism. It is basically a disease of cattle which results in sterility and abortions, but is transmitted to man in the form of undulant fever. "The incidents of fever are quite low today, because of the relentless efforts of state officials such as Doctor George Stiles, and the cooperation of the cattle industry," Sidwell said.

The old brucellosis eradication law was passed when one out of 12 cows were infected with the disease, Sidwell said. To get the eradication program started, those animals tested which were infected with the organism were slaughtered, and an indemnity of $25 for commercial grade cows, and $50 for purebred cows would be paid to compensate, in part, for the loss to the cattlemen.

"It became evident in the late 1950's that this method would not eradicate the disease for there were no provisions for condemning and paying indemnities for those cattle which were exposed and carrying the organism," Sidwell said. The old limitations of indemnity payments were creating financial hardships for cattle producers, causing them to retain suspected animals longer than they should. Hence, revised livestock disease eradication statutes were passed in 1959, he added.

The new statutes allowed for not only condemning exposed animals, but provided for indemnity payments as well. The statutes provide that the indemnity shall be the difference between the appraised value and the slaughtered value of the animal with no specifications as to the amount. Dr. Stiles, state veterinarian, stated reasons for affixing the indemnity at the $50, or $100 level were two-fold. First, to coincide with national brucellosis indemnities, and second, to save Missouri taxpayers thousands of dollars which full time state appraisers would cost. The state veterinarian also pointed out that the $50 and $100 indemnity program has saved thousands in payments because where appraisals have been made, the settlements always have been more than the scheduled payments.

"This method of indemnity payment has met the approval of the majority of cattle owners, even though they have not received full value for their condemned cattle," Sidwell pointed out, "because cattlemen, themselves, are willing to make reasonable sacrifice to eradicate the dreaded disease."

Praises Truman's Stand on Rights

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Former Supreme Court Justice Tom C. Clark told the National Association of Human Rights Workers Wednesday night that it was former President Harry S. Truman who turned "the nation's conscience to making equality a reality."

Clark, who stepped down from the Supreme Court in 1967, said Truman was "committed to civil rights when the country was largely uncommitted." He said Truman risked his political career by bucking the strong southern wing of the Democratic party.

Clark said he believed Truman had begun the modern civil rights movement through his 1948 executive order banning racial discrimination in the armed forces and by his founding in 1947 of the President's Commission on Human Rights.

The former Supreme Court Justice said he had talked with Mrs. Bess Truman by telephone earlier Wednesday and that she had thanked the association for recognizing her husband's early stand for civil rights.

Today Clark was to present letters and documents pertaining to Truman's civil rights efforts to the Truman Library in Independence.

Another speaker at the convention was Julian Bond, the black Georgia state representative, who assailed the Nixon administration's civil rights record.

Bond said this year's election is crucial for black Americans. "The exchange of presidents is more than the exchange of photographs on the post office wall. This election will determine," he declared, "whether the cause of civil rights will go forward, run in place or slide back as it has since 1968."

Bond called Sen. George McGovern, the Democratic presidential candidate, "the finest and most decent spirit in American politics today." He said Nixon stated in 1968 that any man in the president's office four years who could not bring peace does not deserve a second chance.

"His name is Richard Nixon," Bond said, "and his four years are up."

THE FIAT 850 SPIDER. BUYING IT WON'T LEAVE YOU TOO BROKE TO ENJOY IT.

Most sports cars have one serious disadvantage, the price. By the time you've gotten up the money for the car, there's not much left to be a sport with.

That's why we built the 850 Spider. It's the lowest priced true sports car there is.

And it's still one of the newest because it started with a completely new design. It's not a revised version of an older model like the other sports cars under $3,000.

As a result, it incorporates many important design features that have emerged in the last 20 years. Independent suspension all round, front-wheel disc brakes, rear-mounted lightweight engine. And with all of this it'll take you about 30 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

As for the interior, Road & Track magazine found "...the cockpit near faultless, the seats comfortable and the driving position excellent." Even the top is a new design. You can raise or lower it with one hand.

And there's something else. We think the 850 Spider is the most beautiful sports car selling under $10,000. Of course, beauty is a matter of taste but in this case, it's the taste of Bertone—one of Italy's most famous automobile designers.

Now if you find all this a little hard to believe, don't take our word for it—take the word of the people who read Car and Driver magazine. Last year, they voted the 850 Spider the best GT/sports car in its class.

Which is all the more impressive when you remember it's also the least expensive car in its class.
